Postoffice Hit as Storm Lashes City

Lightning Sets Fire to Eighth Floor of New Building.

Fallen Trees, Live Wires Endanger Residents; Homes Flooded.

Temperatures recorded at the Weather Bureau here yesterday were:

10 a. m.	83	4 p. m.	69
11 a. m.	86	5 p. m.	74
Noon	88	6 p. m.	71
1 p. m.	89	7 p. m.	71
2 p. m.	92	8 p. m.	71
3 p. m.	38

Accompanied by blinding lightning, which struck the new Postoffice Department Building, the severest wind and rain storm of the season swept Washington yesterday, blowing down between 50 and 75 trees, disrupting traffic and throwing the city into general confusion.

The storm broke about 3:15 p. m., and a short time later lightning forked into a 13,000-volt transformer in the southeast wing of the eighth floor of the postoffice. The noise was heard in all parts of the building, and officials and clerks dropped their work as lights went out.

No attendants were close enough to the transformer to be injured, and firemen from many companies arrived a few minutes later to extinguish the blaze. Damage was unestimated, but officials said they believed it was slight.

Drills Hole in Smokestack.

The lightning drilled a hole in the smokestack of the Wilkins Coffee Co. on Rhode Island avenue between Fifth and Sixth streets northeast, and split a giant tree in the 1700 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Several high-tension wires were blown down by the wind, which reached a velocity of 58 miles an hour at the height of the storm. A total of .94 of an inch of rain fell during the half hour the storm raged. The precipitation during the first 20 minutes was .86 of an inch.

A live wire was hurled to the street at Harewood road and Michigan avenue northeast, and police immediately threw a guard around it. Another wire was blown down in the 3700 block Ingomar street northwest.

Water Floods Basements.

As soon as the storm broke, police were deluged by calls for help. Water flooded basements in several sections of the city and damaged many Georgetown gardens.

Trees were blown down in the 1300 blocks of M and N streets

Vienna Is Cool To Von Papen

Austrian Officials Absent as Germany's New Envoy Arrives.

Vienna, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Normal diplomatic relations between Austria and Germany were restored today with the arrival of Col. Franz von Papen, new minister to Vienna.

Von Papen, however, was given a cool reception when he reached the capital. He motored from the airport at Aspern, outside Vienna, directly to the German Legation, guarded by a police riot squad escort of 30.

The new minister flew here from Germany. The airdrome was guarded by armed police.

Only members of the German Legation staff welcomed the new envoy, Austrian officials being conspicuously absent.

A fair-sized crowd along the route to the legation watched the motor procession. Some dared to shout "Heil Hitler!" as Von Papen drove past. The latter raised his arm silently, in the Nazi salute.

Failure of Austrian officials to receive an envoy of such rank caused widespread comment. The Fascist government of Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg already had indicated its hesitation in approving his appointment by delaying for several days approval of Von Papen as the German envoy.

Von Papen will present his credentials to President Wilhelm Miklas tomorrow.

Byrd Takes Stroll At 61 Below Zero

Explorer Gets Sunshine Tonic in Antarctica.

Little America, Antarctica, Aug. 15 (A.P.).—(Via Mackay Radio).—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd today had recovered sufficiently to take a stroll in the open air at his advance base, 123 miles south of here.

The admiral walked in a temperature of 61 degrees below zero.

Dr. Thomas C. Poulter, second in command of the Byrd Expedition, who led the tractor expedition which reached the advance base, reported by radio he still is uncertain as to when the trip back will start.

JOHN S. LABATT.

Toronto, Ontario, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—United States gangsters, probably allied with a rum-running ring, were sought tonight as the kidnapers of John S. Labatt, wealthy London (Ontario) brewer, who is held for $150,000 ransom.

A mysterious, dark young man entered the case again tonight when he reappeared at the Royal York Hotel with Inspector John Miller, of the provincial police, and was ushered into the room of Hugh Labatt, the kidnaped man's brother. He remained closeted with the

Hindenburg's Will Praises Hitler Regime

Document Made Public Four Days Before Plebiscite.

Berlin, Aug. 15 (A.P.).—Four days before the plebiscite on Adolf Hitler's assumption of presidential powers, the German people today were given the political testament of Paul von Hindenburg, which described Hitlerism as "a decisive stride" toward inner national unity.

For months the document, which was signed by the late Reichspresident on May 11, 1934, but only now was delivered to Hitler, has been a matter of mystery.

There had been speculation as to whether the aged field marshal had definitely named Hitler or Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen as his successor or had perhaps offered possible solutions for Germany's many problems.

The document remained something of a mystery even after it was published.

Signed at Critical Period.

At the time it was signed questions involving the church, finances and foreign policy were troubling the third Reich.

The query arose today as to why the testament was given out just at this time, when the Nazis are asking the people for another expression of approval.

While the inspired press seized upon the statement as proof of the claim made by Hitler's campaigning lieutenants—that the chancellor is Von Hindenburg's logical successor—others regarded the closing sentence, which looked into the future, as significant.

After praising Hitler and his National Socialist movement for taking a decisive stride "of historical importance toward the goal of leading the German people to inner unity," Von Hindenburg expressed hopes for the future.

"I know that much remains to be

Man Hangs Himself After Striking Mother

Poteau, Okla., Aug. 15 (A.P.).—After striking his mother during a family quarrel, Zelma Conrad, 30, hanged himself at his home near Pocola last night.

Leflore County officers said Conrad's widow told them he had been drinking and apparently believed he had fatally injured his mother.

Legislature Grants Long New Powers

'Steamroller' House Bills Give State Control Over New Orleans.

Walmsley's Supporters Wage Futile Fight to Defeat Senator.

Baton Rouge, La., Aug. 15 (A.P.).—Senator Huey P. Long smiled broadly today as his obedient legislators adopted a resolution to investigate the officialdom of New Orleans.

The action of the special House session was described as similar to the New York City investigation by Samuel Seabury, which resulted in the resignation of Mayor James J. Walker. It was aimed at Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans, bitter enemy of Long since his Old Regular organization defeated the Senator's candidates at the January election.

The House quickly voted to change its methods of procedure to speed action on what anti-administrationists describe as a number of "spite" bills against New Orleans.

Rules Are Suspended.

The rules were suspended, and all measures sent pell mell to one committee, which met immediately to report them out for third reading at a night session. The spectacular procedure will permit final passage of all the legislation tomorrow morning.

The Senate, where Long holds a comfortable majority, met for a short time and adjourned, waiting to act on measures passed by the House.

Walmsley's old regular members of the Legislature fought bitterly against the steam-roller tactics, but were overwhelmed.

Debate approached pathos as oppositionists fought a blind and hopeless battle in the titanic city-State struggle which is making Louisiana history.

Walmsley's forces hung up their victories in politically battle-scarred New Orleans, where Senator Long's National Guardsmen are still holding the city registration office, storm center in the September 11 Congressional primary election, in which Walmsley and Long are supporting rival candidates.

Rules Against Long.

Judge Nat Bond's Civil District Court has issued a temporary injunction restraining the troops from holding the office, and has cited two militia officers for contempt for failing to heed it, but the troops were there just the same.

The same judge, who it was charged on the House floor today was irregularly elected, has rendered a judgment holding that an act providing for a neutral police board in the city was unconstitutional. It was because of this action, Long said, that he called a special session to deal with the city. The new board would have taken control of the police from Walmsley.

The Legislature had before it a score of measures which could almost completely throttle the finances of the city, and others which would increase Long's power.

One provided that the city could not tax anything not already taxed by the State; another that all money collected from gasoline taxes should be placed in the State treasury, and still another which would create a State police force with power to make arrests anywhere.

Mrs. Roosevelt Rescued on Lake

Plattsburg, N. Y. Aug. 15 (A.P.).—The Plattsburgh Press said tonight that a motorboat in which Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was riding on remote Chazy Lake Tuesday drifted on rocks.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her friend, Miss Nancy Cook, have been guests at the camp of Reinald Warrenrath, barytone. According to the newspaper a party of five went out in a motorboat but ran out of gas, drifted upon a rock ledge and stuck fast.

Fishing nearby, Dr. John Stone, of Albany, and Dr. R. Lamb, of Harmon, saw the party's plight, rowed ashore for gas, and returned, bringing Charles Gihon, chauffeur. Gihon pulled the motorboat off the rocks, the newspaper said, but fell overboard. The boat was quickly stopped and Gihon was lifted aboard.

Gasoline Price War Brings D. C. Quotations to 12 Cents

Price warfare broke out among Washington gasoline retailers after four months of comparative quiet yesterday, sending prices down as much as 4.8 cents per gallon.

The new price range was put into effect by the major companies at noon to meet a reduction posted by independent dealers Saturday.

A price war sent retail prices tumbling here last spring, but an agreement was soon reached and gasoline prices have been generally unchanged since. The independents, it was said, agreed to sell regular grade gas at 15.8 cents, while the larger companies asked a cent more Saturday the independents cut prices to 12 cents.

Most of the major oil companies met the new price, which found straight gasoline from 3.8 to 4.8 cents cheaper, depending upon the brand.

At all Shell stations, Super Shell gas was selling at 12 cents and ethyl at 14 cents. Prices at American Oil stations were 12 and 15 cents. Standard was asking 13 cents for its Etholene and 15 for Esso. Cities Service prices were the same for similar grades.

Officials of the Gulf Refining Co. here were awaiting authorization from their Philadelphia headquarters before meeting the new prices. Sinclair prices were to be cut 4.8 cents effective this morning.

The reduced prices gave dealers a differential of 2½ cents over tank-car prices at Baltimore, one of the principal distributing points for this area. The new prices include 3 cents District and Federal taxes.

Black Quits Reserve To Be Liaison Officer Between Banks, U. S.

Retains Duties as Chief of Federal District in Atlanta.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Resigning, effective at once, as governor of the Federal Reserve Board, Eugene R. Black yesterday revealed that in addition to resuming his duties as governor of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank he also will act as liaison officer between the Administration and the banks of the country.

Months ago Mr. Black proposed to President Roosevelt that someone in whom financial circes had confidence should be designated to keep the Administration informed of sentiment in the banking community and interpret to the latter developments in the recovery program in order that both groups might work in cooperation.

After President Roosevelt yesterday was finally prevailed on to accept Mr. Black's long-tendered resignation, he surprised the chief of the Federal Reserve Board by announcing he intended to put this liaison scheme into effect and wanted the latter to undertake the task.

In announcing his acceptance of

Doctor Claims Ellsworth Will Give Byrd Aid

Coman Contradicts Chief, Who Denies He Will Carry Food.

While Lincoln Ellsworth in Honolulu denied that his Antarctic expedition would carry aid to the Byrd expedition at its Little America camp, Dr. Dana Coman, of Johns Hopkins University, doctor for the Ellsworth expedition, confirmed here last night reports that the Ellsworth party would carry pemmican as emergency food for the Byrd camp.

Dr. Coman spent more than a year at Little America during the previous Byrd South Polar Expedition.

Dr. Coman revealed that he, in collaboration with Dr. E. V. McCollum, nutrition expert of the university, had developed a new and improved type of pemmican which would be taken to the Byrd base on the Ellsworth motorship the Wyatt Earp.

The food will be used as an emergency food only, for use on the trail trips and on exploration flights, said Dr. Coman.

"The Byrd expedition has an ample supply of food of every variety at the Little America base," said Dr. Coman. "However, the pemmican type for trail trips needs replenishing, and our expedition will carry our improved brand of this food to Byrd's men."

Dr. Coman vehemently denied published reports that the Byrd Expedition men were suffering from dysentery.

"The only germs in Little America are those which are taken there by

Girl Communist Gets 6 Months as Vagrant

San Francisco, Aug. 15 (A.P.).—Elaine Black, secretary of the International Labor Defense, was sentenced today by Municipal Judge Ames to six months in jail on conviction of vagrancy by a jury.

"I was convicted because of my political beliefs," declared Miss Black. She recently participated in a hunger strike with other alleged Communists in the city prison. George Anderson, defense attorney, said he would appeal.

Tugwell Says South Points Way to Nation

Clemson College, S. C., Aug. 15 (A.P.).—The South has pointed the way to the Nation in economic and agricultural planning, Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, told more than 2,000 persons here today at the State's annual Farm and Home Institute.

"Under the New Deal," he said, "the South is coming into its own again as the partner of the North and West in developing our National future along New Deal cooperative lines.

Big Bird Fleeing Storm Drops on White House Lawn

When yesterday's driving downpour finally let up, White House attendants rubbed startled eyes at the spectacle of a large waterfowl plodding about the mansion's front lawn.

Beat down by the rain, the big bird did not know which way to turn. It resisted all advances of White House policemen, but remained about the premises for some time.

No one could vouch for its species, some professing to believe it a "Blue Eagle," others insisting it was a crane.

Carriers Lose Court Tilt on Pension Act

District Judge Refuses to Halt Enforcement of Legislation.

The Nation's railroads lost their first skirmish with the Railroad Retirement Board yesterday, when Justice James M. Proctor, in the District Supreme Court, refused to issue a preliminary injunction halting enforcement of the railway retirement act.

The refusal came after Hammond C. Chaffitz, special assistant to the Attorney General, said the board is contemplating the issuance of two orders, neither of which would place an undue burden on the roads.

One order, Chaffitz said, was that each Class 1 carrier (those having operating incomes of $1,000,000 a year or more) were to be called upon for a preliminary advance of a tenth of 1 per cent of their July pay rolls. This would total only $125,000 and in no case would require an outlay of more than $5,000 from any one road, he explained.

Neither Burdensome, Judge Rules.

A total of 161 such carriers would be required to make the contribution, he said. The smaller roads in some cases would be called upon for only a few hundred dollars.

The other order would require roads coming within provisions of the act to furnish the board with the names of all employes who will be 70 years old or over by February 1.

Justice Proctor held that neither order placed the railroads in the position of being subjected to "great and irreparable damage."

The carriers have pending in the District Supreme Court a suit seeking an injunction against enforce-

Soviet Demand to Free 17 Held as Plotters Is Ignored.

Tokio (Thursday), Aug. 16 (A.P.).—The acting Soviet consul-general at Hardin has demanded of Manchukuo authorities the release of 17 Soviet subjects arrested on charges of plotting against Manchukuo and Japan, said a Rengo (Japanese) dispatch from Harbin today.

Manchukuo authorities refused to release them, the dispatch said.

The Soviet consul, Nikolai Raivid, complained the action of Manchukuoan authorities was oppressive and unjust.

Those arrested were Russian officials and employes of the Chinese Eastern Railway. All of the accused were taken to Harbin for trial.

Manchukuo officials accused them of collusion with bandits in several recent attacks on the railway, involving Manchukuoan or Japanese military trains.

Fusionists to Oppose Tennessee Governor

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 15 (A.P.).—Definite decision was reached today for the holding of a mass convention of Lewis S. Pope supporters next Tuesday noon to select a fusion candidate for Governor to oppose Gov. Hill McAlister, Democratic nominee, in the November election campaign.

The meeting date is on the eve of the convening of the Democratic State executive committee to canvass the primary returns and declare the nominees, including Gov. McAlister, who defeated Pope in the primary.

Revised NRA Setup Asked By Johnson

Administrator Is Willing to Serve New Board as Chairman.

Favors Separate Agency to Smooth Anti-Trust Law Differences.

Direction of NRA by a board and creation of a separate agency to reconcile antitrust law differences between Federal establishments were advocated yesterday by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

He also threatened to revoke for a second time the Blue Eagle of the Harriman (Tenn.) Hosiery Mills unless the management bargained collectively with representatives of its employes.

Gen. Johnson fairly beamed in anticipation of his possible return to private life as he discussed with reporters his own future in the projected reorganization of NRA along permanent lines within two or three months.

Explaining he thought management of the recovery unit should be delegated to some sort of a board now that code-making has given way to code administration, Gen. Johnson remarked:

"If the President wants me I would be chairman of the board if it didn't require my full time."

Time for Marked Change.

He hurriedly added, however, "I'm not trying to save a place for myself."

The recovery chief said the time had come for a marked change in the NRA set-up.

"I'm now very convinced," he added, "this is no longer a one-man job. People ask me what's happening in the woman's hat code. I don't know. No one person can keep in touch with the details of all that's going on in the many industries.

"We hope to reduce our 500 codes to 250 by coalescence—how's that for a good word—but even then no one person could keep posted on all the details.

"We want industry to be self-governed as much as possible. But we must have a Government representative on every code authority to see that the public is not exploited.

"We have got to have a policy-forming board spread thin enough to see that there is no exploitation of labor, industry or the consumer. No one man could possibly do that."

Undecided on Plan.

Gen. Johnson explained he was undecided whether NRA should be managed by the existing nine-man advisory council, composed of members of the Industrial, Labor and Consumers' Advisory Boards, or by "a sort of high board of commerce" which would be appointed by the President.

At present, he pointed out, NRA has 22 clusters of codes for related industries. Members of the proposed managing board, Gen. Johnson said, would contain specialists on different problems. He likened the managing group to a

M. S. Burroughs, Midland, Killed Instantly.

M. S. Burroughs, of Midland, Va., was killed and Carl Heflin, of Cantlett, Va., was injured critically yesterday when the truck in which they were riding sideswiped a heavier truck on Lee-Jackson highway, 2 miles east of Fairfax Courthouse.

Police said Burroughs, the driver, died almost instantly. He was driving east. The other truck, with W. B. Somcia, of Clifton Station, Va., at the wheel, was going west.

Heflin was taken to Alexandria Hospital. Physicians believe he has a fractured skull and serious internal injuries.

Somcia was held pending an investigation.

Beebe Sees Mammoth Fish In 3,028-Foot Record Dive

Hamilton, Bermuda, Aug. 15 (A.P.).—Dr. William Beebe and Otis Barton, American scientists, spent five minutes at a depth of more than half a mile under the ocean surface today, achieving a new record for deep-sea diving in their two-ton "bathysphere."

The Americans reached a depth of 3,028 feet, bettering their record of last Saturday by 518 feet and their goal of half a mile by 334.

The dive was made at approximately the same spot where they went down four days ago. The daring observers of undersea life were prevented from going deeper only by Capt. James Sylvester, master of the barge from which they dropped into the sea.

Capt. Sylvester ordered that no more cable be paid out, although 47 feet remained on the drum when the two men had reached the maximum depth.

The dive was the last deep sea undertaking of the "bathysphere" expedition planned for this year, but several dives in shallower water along the shore will be made later. In these undertakings the sphere will remain below for longer periods.

Dr. Beebe reported that at 2,750 feet he saw a large gray shadow of the largest fish he ever saw in undersea explorations. It was illuminated by innumerable lights from small creatures.

Barton took motion pictures, including some of the monsters sighted at 2,750 feet.

Later in the afternoon Barton and Gloria Hollister, associate of Dr. Beebe, made a 1,208-foot dive, the third descent for Miss Hollister. She made notes on squids and fishes.

Dr. Beebe said that observations made during the last 500 feet of his dive indicated that for nearly half a mile fishes become larger, more numerous and brightly illuminated.

An American flag and a pennant of the National Geographic Society were fastened to the cable just above the sphere and thus taken farther down in the sea than any flag has ever been.

John Teevan, Jocelyn Crane and other members of the Beebe expedition will make dives in the device later in the week.

Half Million Now Live Here, Figures Show

Increase in Population Reflected by Rise of Store Sales.

It still takes 500,000 to make a half-million, but the Capital's business and civic leaders yesterday were throwing out their chests and proclaiming proudly that Washington at last has graduated into the cities-of-half-million-or-over class.

Handshaking ceremonies were precipitated by the Census Bureau's announcement that the estimated population of the District of Columbia on July 1, 1934, was 497,000.

"Ah, ha," responded Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association and keynoter of the half-million-or-bust clique. "In that case, our true number must be at least 20,000 over that figure because of the influx of Government workers in the past 12 months."

This abnormal influx, borne out by Civil Service Commission fig-

Party Leaders Dispute Result Of Primaries

Farley Sees New Deal Victory, but Hastings Points to Ohio Vote.

With Democratic and Republican leaders at loggerheads over Tuesday's primary returns, Nebraska and Ohio loomed yesterday as major battlefields for a test of the New Deal in the November 6 elections.

A. V. (Vic) Donahey, former Governor, emerged the victor in Ohio's Democratic race for Senator, while Senator Simeon D. Fess, a stubborn thorn in the side of the Administration, resoundingly defeated his Republican opponents.

In Nebraska, Representative E. R. Burke, an ardent New Dealer, won over Gov. Charles W. Bryan, who committed the Democratic heresy of criticizing some, at least, of the Washington experiments. Burke is opposed by former Representative Robert G. Simmons, who is waging a hot fight against the Administration.

The defeat of Gov. Bryan was generally conceded to be a victory for Administration forces, but in Ohio the issue was not so clearly drawn. There Representative Charles West had been put up against Donahey by no less stalwart supporters of the New Deal than Senator Robert J. Bulkley and former Gov. James M. Cox. The latter went so far as to charge that Donahey was out of step with the Roosevelt procession. But while Donahey was cool, advocating a Square Deal, he was not rated as frankly hostile.

Hence, Washington apparently

President Will Leave Capital August 24

President Roosevelt plans to leave Washington for his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., the night of August 24, he said yesterday. He is expected to remain there for at least a month.

Administration officials are expected to form a steady procession to and from Hyde Park for conferences with the Chief Executive, who is somewhat cramped for room now because of rebuilding of his Executive offices.

Government to Use All Powers to Prevent Speculation.

Supplies Ample, Officials Assert

Prices Bound to Advance Moderately; Drought Aid Discussed.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Speculators in farm commodities yesterday received stern warning from President Roosevelt that he will use every means at the Government's disposal to prevent unwarranted rises in food prices.

Under White House orders, the Department of Agriculture intensified its watch over exchanges, with the view of stepping in at any time the upward trend gives evidence of artificial manipulation.

Mr. Roosevelt minimized consumer fears that the cost of living will mount to excessive heights this winter, and discredited reports of a prospective food shortage as result of the continuing drought.

Drought Survey Released.

Coincident with his outline of conditions, the Department of Agriculture released a drought survey, declaring that "food supplies for the Nation as a whole are ample," but that "certain food crops will be decidedly short in many areas."

Prices for many farm products already are moving forward, the report said, and "sooner or later most crops, live stock and live stock products, the production of which has been adversely affected by the drought, will have their prices raised."

Concentrating on the unprecedented relief problem in most of the West, the President called in Administration officials in the afternoon to broaden the scope of their efforts, particularly as regards live stock.

Mr. Roosevelt's expected statement on farm and drought policy took the form of answers to questions at the first press conference since his return. With easy informality, he received correspondents in the blue oval room, which was crowded to capacity.

Mr. Roosevelt said the increase in food prices during the past 12 months has not been material, perhaps 6 per cent, and indications are the general rise in the cost of living this winter will be moderate.

Believing that the great majority of food dealers will not attempt to "chisel" as a result of the drought, he said he recognized that some profiteering will follow. To combat this, he said the Government has sufficient authority and will devise methods to insure fair prices to the consumer.

Already the Department of Agriculture's Grain Futures Administration has considerable information on speculators who have transferred their activities from stocks to the faster moving grains, Mr. Roosevelt said. As an instance of what will be prevented, he cited the case of a wheat speculator, whom he identified only as a Louisiana dentist, who last year ran his holdings up to 20,000,000 bushels, on a shoestring.

Wheat shot up to $1.23, entirely out of line with economic conditions, the President said. In the resulting crash to 95 cents, the farmer was badly hurt. By step-

Brooke Lee Quits As County Chief

Successor to Be Named at Meeting Tomorrow.

Maj. E. Brooke Lee will sever his last official connection tomorrow night as Democratic organization leader of Montgomery County, Md., it was learned yesterday. A meeting of Democratic organization workers for the Silver Spring section has been called to elect a successor to Maj. Lee as chairman of that group.

The meeting is to be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Takoma-Silver Spring High School, according to letters workers of the Silver Spring precincts will receive today. Maj. Lee will present his resignation as chairman and preside for the last time.

Maj. Lee, who has led the Democratic forces of the county for 15 years, is retiring from politics to devote his time to his real estate business.

Court Writ Holds Up Ban on Liquor Ads

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 15 (A.P.).—The Louisville Times today obtained a circuit court order to restrain the city liquor control board from enforcing its recently adopted rule prohibiting liquor price advertising. Hearing on the newspaper's petition for a permanent injunction was set for August 23.

The Times suit charged that the city's liquor regulations favored certain manufacturers who desired to fix and maintain high prices for whisky.

ping in to prevent manipulation, under broad powers already vested in the Grain Futures Administration, the Government would be following an exactly opposite course to its own heavy purchases through the former Farm Board, which sought to raise prices.

Grain Market Activity.

Activity in the grain markets now is at the highest level in history, with the exception of one year, for this time of the season, according to J. M. Mehl, assistant chief of the GFA. If evidence of manipulation is found, he pointed out, the administration has power to call a hearing at which accused operators must appear and show cause why their trading privileges should not be suspended.

Mr. Roosevelt held that the drought does not affect the principles behind the AAA, which is embarked on production control, in the slightest. He declared that this agency is based on a simple, practical policy adopted 1½ years ago. With wheat as an example, he said that the AAA before the drought had raised domestic prices above the world level and that while the surplus was being progressively lowered a reasonable carry-over was presupposed.

Actually, declared the President, the chief effect of the drought will be to reduce surpluses two or three years ahead of schedule. With this in mind, he said the AAA will carry on in a normal way while Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's granary system is considered. Under this plan, which may require legislation, the Government will store up normal surpluses from year to year, insuring both adequate supplies and a reasonable market.

Mr. Roosevelt's observations clearly indicated that he considered the AAA, which was launched as an experiment, a success to date. Similarly, he said he was entirely satisfied with present machinery to alleviate the drought. Further, he expects the $525,000,000 relief fund to be sufficient, although indications are it all will be needed.

Attending the White House conference during the afternoon were Secretaries Wallace, Perkins and Ickes, Acting Relief Administrator Aubrey Williams, AAA Administrator Chester C. Davis and others. According to Miss Perkins, it was called for a general discussion of the situation and methods to coordinate an broaden the relief efforts of the several agencies in the field.

Live-Stock Feed Short.

Secretary Wallace said in all probability a committee will be named to supervise distribution of feed for live stock in the stricken area. Declaring that this represented the chief immediate problem, he added, "There's plenty of food for humanity, but with live stock it's different."

Mr. Williams said his organization intended to redouble its efforts, providing work relief to the unemployed up to $25 a month. Already 750,000 are now working for the Government in the drought sector, engaged in such activity as water conservation and digging wells, 5,000 of which have been drilled in Kansas.

Recommends Suspension.

In a conference with the President, Senator John H. Bankhead, Alabama Democrat, who is jointly author with his Congressional brother of the cotton control act, recommended that the processing tax on cotton be suspended during the marketing period. He further asked that cotton be pegged at the present 13-cent price by means of Government loans.

The agricultural report said that drought damage up to August 15 "has been far greater than anticipated earlier in the season." But stocks of bread grains and other food products are large. Production of most canning crops will be about normal, fruits and veletables are "fairly abundant" outside the drought area, and the supply of meat, dairy and poultry products is adequate for the rest of the year.

"But local supplies of certain food crops will be decidedly short in many areas," it added, "requiring more than usual shipments from other localities."

While the consumer will bear the burden of higher costs, the report saw little benefit for the farmer because of reduction in the volume of products sold. The summary noted the sharp rise in grains and said that live stock products may be expected to mount when the Government liquidation of purchased stock is completed. Already more than 2,500,000 head of cattle have been bought, and the AAA plans to buy 5,000,000 more cattle and 5,000,000 head of sheep and goats.

Swedish Prince to Wed Juliana, Report Says

London, Aug. 15 (AP).—Princess Juliana of The Netherlands has been endowed with another prospective husband by rumor mongers. The latest of the numerous princes with whom her name has been linked is Prince Charles of Sweden, nephew of King Gustav.

The Stockholm correspondent of the London Mail says that, notwithstanding official denials, the rumor persists that this engagement will be announced on August 31, the birthday anniversary of Queen Wilhelmina.

Threat of Hide Dumping Is Halted by U, S. Action

The Federal Surplus Relief Corporation yesterday moved to revive the leather industry by removing the threat of Governmental dumping of hides from slaughtered drought cattle on the already depressed market.

Tanners were notified that, beginning September 5, the FSRC, of which Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins is president, will take over all hides and skins obtained from Government cattle and sheep slaughtered for relief purposes.

The hides, in most cases, will be purchased from packers, to whom they were given by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and other Governmental agencies in payment for slaughtering.

To finance this venture, the Commodity Credit Corporation will turn over to the FSRC $10,000,000 obtained from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. This fund previously was offered to the tanning industry for organization of a stabilizing market corporation.

Jobless Relief.

The decision to allow the FSRC to absorb the surplus hides and utilize them for unemployment relief came after several conferences among the FERA, the RFC, the Commodity Credit Corporation, and the National Tanners Council.

Hide merchants and shoe manufacturers have been urging the Government to come to the aid of the leather industry ever since relief agencies began purchasing and slaughtering cattle at the rate of 50,000 to 60,000 a day.

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration is planning to take 2,000,000 sheep out of the drought area as a relief measure.

They called attention to the fact that prices for hides have fallen to less than 6 cents a pound from a normal level of 9 cents, and predicted that a dumping of the Government surplus, now held by the packers, would wreck the industry.

One of the relief proposals suggested was that a market corporation be set up by the tanning industry to buy and store hides until the market became more normal and then to release them gradually.

Under the plan adopted yesterday, the Federal Government will not enter the commercial market at all, buying only the hides stripped from its own cattle. These hides will be permanently removed from the commercial market so as to avoid any competition with private industry.

Made Into Shoes.

Just what disposition will be made of the hides has not been determined, FSRC officials said, but it is probable that they will be converted into shoes for the most part. In such an undertaking, relief workers would be used to make the shoes, and the finished products would be distributed exclusively among the needy unemployed.

Removal of the Government hides from the commercial market will not eliminate the surplus of hides that has accumulated during the last several years, Federal officials stated, but the action is expected to effect a raise in current prices.

Not only will the threat of dumping be removed, it was said, but the supply of hides on the commercial market will shortly be reduced on account of removal of thousands of cattle from the drought area.

The Governmental relief agencies have already acquired some 2,500,000 cattle for slaughtering, and it is held inevitable that market prices will react upwards as a result.

Woman Dies In River Leap

Body Is Recovered From Anacostia; Still Unidentified.

The body of a young woman who leaped 30 feet to her death in the Anacostia River from the old Benning Bridge yesterday lay unidentified at the District Morgue last night.

Described as a small brunette, about 28, the victim freed herself after a struggle with two members of the construction crew replacing the bridge and ran to the rail and plunged to the water, which is extremely deep there.

Harbor Precinct policemen and workers on the bridge recovered her body about noon. She was bareheaded and wore a light cotton dress.

The construction foreman who caught the young woman before she broke away and leaped to the river said he saw her coming from the east end of the bridge, sobbing. Police were told she had left an automobile driven by a young man a few minutes before.

Client's Bullet Kills Judge in California

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 15 (AP).—Shot eight days ago in an altercation with a disgruntled client, Police Judge Howard L. Bacon, 51, died today.

Dominick Heffron, 63, formerly of Anaconda, Mont., who had been held on a charge of assault with intent to commit murder, will be charged with slaying Judge Bacon, police said. They alleged Heffron fired at the judge after seeking the return of papers in a divorce suit.

Canada Hunts U. S. Gangsters In Kidnap Case

police officer and the brother of the abducted man for about half an hour, when he left hurriedly with Inspector Miller.

Earlier in the evening the swarthy young man had arrived at the hotel shortly after the floor on which Hugh Labatt's room is located was cleared of newspapermen and hotel guests.

He knocked on a door adjoining Labatt's room and spoke in undertones to a police officer who answered the knock.

"It won't cause you any embarrassment," the youth was heard to whisper.

Many believe the swarthy young man to be an emissary of the kidnapers who promised to contact Hugh Labatt at the hotel early today. Police refused to divulge the young man's connection with the case, however.

All available law-enforcement agencies in middle Canada were pressed into service as the government indicated its intention of striking quickly at the abductors.

Though Huge Labatt remained in his hotel room patiently awaiting a promised contact from the kidnapers, reports that such contact had been made were vigorously denied.

The brother was prepared, it was understood, to hand over $150,000 in cash to the kidnapers, but he said he had not heard from them today. They stipulated, in the ransom note left in Labatt's automobile yesterday, that they would contact the brother at the Royal York Hotel at 10 a. m. today.

When it became apparent that abductors had not communicated with Labatt, enforcement agencies, including the famed Royal Canadian Mounted Police, set to work in a determined effort to turn up information that might lead to the place where Labatt is held captive. It was understood that scores of mounted officers would be sent into the London-Sarnia area, where the kidnaping occurred.

All police reserves were organized in the greatest manhunt Canada has ever seen. All leaves were canceled, vacationers on law enforcement agencies recalled and police from quiet outlying districts summoned into the search area.

Meanwhile, Labatt's wife, having recovered from the first shock of her husband's abduction, appealed to the kidnapers to guard his health with extreme care. The wealthy brewer has been warned by physicians that any excitement might prove fatal because of his weak heart.

Labatt, it was learned, was forced by his abductors to write a few words on the back of the ransom note, asking that the $150,000 be paid immediately.

"Do everything possible to obtain my release and obey orders," the note urged.

Ask Government Aid.

When it appeared that the kidnapers—first to demand ransom in Canadian history—had not followed their own instructions contained in their note, Attorney General Arthur Roebuck, of Ontario, communicated with the Hon. Hugh Guthrie, minister of justice, at Ottawa, and asked for government aid. He also held hurried conferences with Gen. S. C. Newburn, head of the Ontario Mounted Police; Gen. Victor Williams, of the Ontario Provincial Police, and Gen. D. C. Draper, chief of the Toronto Police Department.

Hugh Labatt spent all last night and today in his hotel room, refusing to leave for fear of missing a telephone call or other communication from his brother's abductors. He had all his meals served in the room and even called for a barber to shave him.

"All we can do," Labatt said, "is sit and wait and hope."

A heavy police guard was placed around the Labatt home at London on the possibility that the kidnapers might attempt reprisals against Mrs. Labatt and the three children. Police revealed that the children have been guarded for several weeks for fear of kidnap attempts.

No U. S. Tax Rise Seen By Democratic Leader

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 15 (AP).—Representative Sam B. Hill (Democrat), Washington, chairman of the Congressional sub-committee on taxation, said today the committee does not contemplate raising the tax rate.

"On the basis of the present tax rate level sufficient revenue will be raised to meet the current expenses of government for the fiscal year ending June, 1935," Hill said. "We are looking chiefly for loopholes through which certain interests have been escaping taxation."

Leaders Dispute Primary Results

Farley Sees New Deal Victory, but Hastings Points to Ohio Vote.

must wait until the general elections before verdict is finally passed on whether the trend is for, or against, the drastic experimentation now under way, at least as far as Ohio and Nebraska are concerned. In the case of Senator Fess a more bitter opponent to the existing regime could hardly be chosen.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt yesterday proclaimed anew his absolute neutrality in party conflicts. With a show of some amusement, he informed his press conference that, newspaper reports to the contrary notwithstanding, he has not, and will not, take sides. It had been generally reported that by quoting Representative Burke in his Green Bay speech, the President conferred his favor.

While Administration followers were openly jubilant over the Nebraska result, Senator Daniel O. Hastings, co-chairman of the Republican Senatorial-Congressional Committee, hastened to call attention to the defeat of West in Ohio. Both the Senator and Postmaster General James A. Farley issued statements reading exactly opposite meanings into the primary returns.

Farley Felicitates Donahey.

As though to offset his reported preference for Representative West, Mr. Farley wired his congratulations to Donahey. Then he added, significantly, "When you come to the Senate in January, backed as you will be by the united Democracy of Ohio, I am certain the progressive legislation of the Roosevelt Administration will find in you an ardent and enthusiastic supporter."

So far the Democrats have nominated no candidate who expressed open hostility to the President. But at the same time, the Republican opponents of the New Deal have had equal success in getting renominated, which points to a general showdown in November. Democrats were anxiously hopeful in Ohio, emphasizing that more voters entered their primary than the rival Republican contest.

Declaring that "a pronounced Roosevelt New Deal sentiment is gripping the voting population," Mr. Farley stated:

"With a total of 26 States having held their primaries, accounting for 263 out of 435 members, or more than 60 per cent of the entire House membership, the results justify completely the feeling that the New Deal is increasingly popular with the people of the country.

"In the coming fall elections we should gain at least six Senate seats for the Democrats. A check of the Congressional situation in all of the States has increased the optimism that I entertained last week following my swing through 14 Western States."

Mr. Farley began another tour of the West yesterday, planning to go as far as Denver. Earlier in the day he called at the White House and presumably gave the President his impressions of results to date. His statement also said that both the Administration and the National committee are neutral in party fights, but that "undoubtedly individual members had their preferences."

Senator Hastings said that Mr. Roosevelt had made a "thinly disguised appeal for the support of all New Dealers," regardless of party, in his Green Bay speech. Mentioning the "blessings" bestowed on Senators Hiram Johnson and Robert M. La Follette, Progressives, he added:

"This situation can mean but one thing, a determination on the part of the President to build up, not the Democratic party, but a Roosevelt party."

Hastings Predicts Failure.

The Senator professed to think that this effort will be a failure, for, he added, that "in recent poltical tests the New Deal has not been faring so well. In fact, it has taken a couple of hard knocks." He referred to the defeat of Representative West, "who was entered in the race by the Roosevelt Administration as an outstanding exponent of the New Deal."

Further, he said that Gen. Farley "personally entered" Clem Shaver in the recent West Virginia primary and that Rush Holt "beat him two to one, in face of the fact that Holt, if elected, would be too young, under the Constitution, to take a seat in the Senate." Both the Ohio and West Virginia primaries "must mean something," he concluded, in the defeat of "the New Deal's handpicked candidates."

At the same time, both Idaho and Arkansas, as well as Ohio and Nebraska, nominated Governors in Tuesday's primaries. Associated Press dispatches showed that Gov. J. M. Futrell, Democrat, has been renamed in Arkansas, his election conceded. Gov. Ben C. Ross, of Idaho was nominated for a third term by the Democrats, opposed by Frank L. Stephan, former Republican State attorney general.

In Ohio, Martin L. Davey, tree surgeon, maintained a good lead for the Democratic nomination, while Clarence J. Brown was far in front for the Republicans. In Nebraska, Dwight Griswold, weekly newspaper publisher, was ahead in the Republican contest, with R. L. Cochran, State engineer, his likely opponent.

Donahey to Face Fess In Ohio Senate Race

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—A stanch old warrior returned to the political scene today when Alvin Victory Donahey—"Honest Vic" to the people of the Ohio hinterlands—swept over two powerful opponents to become Democratic nominee for United States Senator.

In the November elections he will meet an adversary every bit as colorful and as schooled in politics—Simeon D. Fess, "old guard" Republican, seeking his third term in the Senate.

Donahey defeated Representative Charles West and Gov. White by a plurality that approached 100,000 votes. Returns from 8,313 of the State's 8,522 precincts gave Donahey 256,006; West, 165,856; White, 163,096.

Fess' plurality over Judge Walter B. Wanamaker, his nearest opponent, was nearly 200,000 votes. A tabulation from 8,495 precincts gave Fess 302,618; Wanamaker, 106,940; John M. Vorys, 57,905.

Martin L. Davey, tree surgeon, of Kent, Ohio, won the Democratic nomination for Governor with a plurality of about 22,000 votes, defeating Lieutenant Governor Charles Sawyer and William G. Pickrel. The latest tabulation from 8,313 precincts gave Davey 210,046; Sawyer, 188,910; Pickerel, 180,295.

Clarence J. Brown, Blanchester publisher, polled the highest popular vote of the primary in winning the Republican nomination for Governor in a field of seven candidates. The tabulation from 8,338 precincts gave Brown 326,275; Dan Morgan, Cleveland, 182,854; A. Elden, 33,486, and C. Nelson Sparks, 32,729.

Lincoln, Nebr., Aug. 15 (AP).—Edward R. Burke, a first-term Representative from Omaha, rode an avalanche of primary election ballots to a decisive victory over Gov. Charles W. Bryan for the Democratic Senatorial nomination.

Pledged to support President Roosevelt, his vote in yesterday's balloting rolled near the 100,000 mark with three-fourths of the State's precincts in and Bryan beaten by more than 2 to 1. The triumph answered the demand of Arthur F. Mullen, former Democratic National committeeman, to drive Bryan out of State politics.

In the November election Burke will face an aggressive "New Deal" opponent, former Representative Robert G. Simmons.

Dwight Griswold, Gordon publisher, Republican, and R. L. Cochran, for 12 years State engineer, Democrat, had secured the gubernatorial nominations.

One Democratic Representative, A. C. Shallenberger, was beaten in the primaries. The other, Edgar Howard, won out, but his margin was none too large.

The total Democratic vote apparently exceeded the Republican vote by a substantial figure.

Returns from 1,985 of 2,028 precincts for the Democratic Senatorial nomination gave Bryan, 50,114; Burke, 116,364.

With 1,984 precincts reported for the Republican Senatorial nomination, the count was Robert Smith, 33,053; Simmons, 72,939; K. S. Wherry, 40,716.

Returns from 1,984 precincts for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination gave Carpenter, 41,650; Eugene O'Sullivan, 39,655; Roy Cochran, 52,912.

Returns from 1,993 precincts for Republican gubernatorial nomination gave Ted Metcalfe, 34,159; Griswold, 88,932; C. A. Sorensen, 40,232.

Ross Will Be Seeking Third Term in Idaho

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 15 (AP).—Gov. C. Ben Ross, Democrat, won renomination in yesterday's Idaho primary and will be opposed for a third term in November by Frank L. Stephan, former attorney general, the victor in the Republican gubernatorial race.

With more than two-thirds of the total vote tabulated today, Gov. Ross, a former cowboy, had polled 24,930 votes to 13,789 for Frank Martin and 6,856 for Asher B. Wilson.

In the Republican primary the vote for Governor gave Stephan 14,188; J. Wesley Holden, 8,685, and H. F. Fait, 3,237.

Representative Compton I. White, Democrat, was renominated in the First Congressional District over State Senator E. V. Van Hoesen. His opponent will be former Representative Burton L. French, Republican, whom he defeated two years ago.

D. Worth Clark, of Pocatello, former assistant attorney general, was the Democratic victor in the Second Congressional District, where a vacancy was left by the death of Representative Thomas C. Coffin, Democrat.

The outcome was undecided in the Second District Republican race, where only a few hundred votes separated Heber Q. Hale, prominent Latter Day Saint Church leader, and Henry Dworshak, former State American Legion commander, the leaders in a field of eight. Returns from 248 major precincts out of a total of 426 gave Hale 4,238 and Dworshak 3,910.

With one exception, the Democratic State officeholders seeking reelection won their party's nomination. W. H. Simons, State mine inspector, fell steadily behind Arthur Campbell, of Mullan.

Hindenburg's Will Praises Hitler Regime

Document Made Public Four Days Before Plebiscite.

done," he wrote, "and from the bottom of my heart wish the act of national regeneration and unification may be followed by an act of reconciliation to embrace the whole German fatherland."

By some neutral observers this was taken to mean that Von Hindenburg hoped for reconciliation of the troublesome church situation, perhaps for restoration of the monarchy, or again for a greater effort to achieve international peace than the Nazis so far have put forth.

All three projects are known to have been close to the Reichspresident's heart.

"The last period of my life has seen the development of the internal unity of the people and their consciousness of their best characteristics," he wrote.

"I was nevertheless aware that the basic law of the state and the form of government, which the nation gave itself in the hour of great disaster and internal weakness, did not correspond with the real needs and characteristics of the people.

"The hour was yet to arrive when this knowledge became public property."

Reichswehr Is Praised.

The testament then reviewed the difficulties facing Germany during postwar days, and referred to the maintenance of the Reichswehr (regular army) as the "symbol and solid basis" of the old German virtues.

"I thank Providence," Von Hindenburg wrote at the end of his recitation of Germany's troubles, "for permitting me to see in the evening of my life the hour of recovery. I thank all those who in unselfish love of the fatherland have cooperated in the work of Germany's resurgence."

The concluding words were:

"In this firm faith in the future of the fatherland I can close my eyes in peace."

These words were blazoned by the influential newspaper Nachtsausgabe, which called the testament an "acknowledgment of the goal of Hitler and his administration."

Von Papen Carries Message.

Von Papen, who may have thought a month ago that he had been named the "Sturdy Oak's" successor, and who was regarded as the president's close friend and protege, had the task of carrying the testament to Hitler.

On his way to Vienna to become minister and seek to patch up difficulties between Germany and Austria, he stopped at Hitler's summer home at Berchtesgaden.

Von Papen had been entrusted with the testament by Col. Oskar von Hindenburg.

It was in an envelope sealed by the Reichspresident and bearing these words:

"To the German people and their chancellor. My testament. This letter is to be transmitted to the Reichskanzler by my son."

The testament was written in professorial, almost pompous German, but the wording did not obscure the old man's sincerity in hoping the best for his beloved fatherland.

In telling of the postwar feelings of despair which he coupled with his declarations of hope, the old field marshal reiterated his conviction that Germany should have a "pure conscience" regarding the World War.

Police last night made the sections devastated by the wind and lightning resemble carnival grounds as red lanterns were placed on uprooted trees and broken limbs as warnings to motorists.

Traffic was tied up generally by the downpour, which came in solid, dousing gray sheets. Awnings were tossed helter-skelter by the ripping wind in many parts of the city.

With the exception of the postoffice call, the Fire Board reported only two box alarms and five local alarms.

Debris Litters Streets.

Debris littered many streets. In addition to the demolished trees, hundreds of limbs were broken off and strewn up and down the sidewalks.

A falling tree crashed onto an automobile on Decatur street northwest, between Eighth and Ninth streets, but the driver escaped injury. The 3400 block on Prospect street was as hard hit as any other thoroughfare. Three trees and three huge limbs were blown down in this block alone.

Potomac Park was hard hit by the storm's fury, seven trees fringing Lincoln Memorial pool being blown down. At Washington Monument, where workmen engaged in cleaning and repairing the shaft were preparing to quit for the day when the storm broke, a toolhouse was blown 20 feet and another was wrecked.

As the Weather Bureau predicted showers and not much change in temperature for today, a fresh shower began to fall last night.

New NRA Setup Asked by Johnson

typical board of directors of a corporation and to the old War Industries Board, of which he was a member.

The managing board, Gen. Johnson declared, should concern itself principally with matters of policy and turn over administrative problems to an executive officer.

Asked whether the executive officer would assume his present title of administrator, Gen. Johnson twitted:

"You can call him steamboat if you want to."

Gen. Johnson said he did not believe the managing board should be composed of a Cabinet member because such official would not be able to devote sufficient time to the task. He also emphasized the chairman should not possess "dictatorial" powers.

Up to Congress.

Under questioning, Gen. Johnson conceded a year ago he did not expect it would be desirable to make NRA permanent. He made clear the program would have to be approved by Congress, but said he saw no reason why the reorganization should not be effected in the meanwhile.

He said he would discuss the program shortly with President Roosevelt and Donald Richberg, acting director of the National Emergency Council.

Mr. Richberg already has begun a study of differences between NRA and the Federal Trade Commission over antitrust laws, Gen. Johnson disclosed.

Suspension of antitrust laws through the recovery act has been criticized by Senators Borah (Republican), Idaho, and Nye (Republican), North Dakota.

"There is a conflict between the theory of the antitrust acts as the Federal Trade Commission and the NRA see them," he said.

"We think controlled competition is the answer. They say there can only be uncontrolled competition. We need some sort of a new institution to reconcile the differences.

"The whole idea of codes resulting in monopoly is the bunk. The small business man never is hurt unless he is hurt when he pays higher wages. Price-fixing certainly doesn't hurt him, although it may hurt the consumer. It is price-cutting that hurts the little fellow."

Dissatisfaction with the manner in which the Harriman case was handled during his absence on a recent Western trip was expressed by Gen. Johnson. The mill's eagle, revoked in April for failure to grant collective bargaining to employes, was restored late last month.

"If I had been here," Gen. Johnson declared, "the eagle never would have been returned. As I understand it, the management of the mill now refuses to recognize the representatives of its employes. If I find they do refuse such recognition, I'll consider it a fresh violation and I'll again remove the eagle."

Berry Explains Status.

Gen. Johnson then called on Maj. George L. Berry, an assistant administrator, to explain the status of the case. Maj. Berry said NRA had asked the mill to reemploy immediately 25 strikers, reemploy 25 additional strikers by January 1 and to agree to establishment of a State cotton textile board to see that the rights of the employes are protected. The board, Maj. Berry said, would report to NRA once a month.

Maj. Berry said labor had agreed to the new plan.

Gen. Johnson said he had not been informed of reports that large mail-order houses were planning to disregard minimum prices fixed by NRA for retail tires. He said the firms promised him they would abide by the NRA prices and he still expected them to carry out their pledge.

Asked what he thought of reports that he would succeed Will H. Hays as czar of the motion picture industry, Gen. Johnson countered, "there are ladies present."

Explaining his Western trip was given over to business rather than pleasure, as originally intended, Gen. Johnson announced he would depart at the end of the week on a two-week vacation at Rehoboth Beach, Del.

Brain Hurt in Fall, Ohioan Is Talking Himself to Death

Mount Gilead, Ohio, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Donald Campbell, 32, a slight, worried little truck driver, tonight continued slowly to talk himself to death.

Dr. C. S. Jackson, brain specialist, packed the sick man's head in ice bags and tried other expedients to give Campbell the sleep he must have if he is to survive an inflammation of the lower part of the brain attributed partly to a fall.

Campbell has talked steadily for ten days except for a few hours when he was drugged. Except for his continuous conversation, in a voice now hoarse and rasping, he is rational. He answers questions and recognizes those about him.

Black Quits Reserve Job For Bank Relations Post

end that the capital market might be opened up.

The selection of Mr. Black for this post was regarded as another gesture on the part of the Administration to reassure the financial and business world that it is not hostile to legitimate business. The purpose appears to be to stimulate increasing the flow of private capital, held to be more important to success of the recovery program at this stage than any other factor.

Successor Not Selected.

"If I can make a success of my job of bringing the banks and the Administration to a closer understanding and greater cooperation," Mr. Black said, "it would be a wonderful piece of work. If it fails it shows at any rate that an earnest effort is being made."

President Roosevelt has not yet determined who will be Mr. Black's successor at the helm of the Federal Reserve System and it was believed that for a few days at least the post would be left vacant. Although the Federal reserve act provides that the President should designate one member of the board as vice governor, President Roosevelt has not done so.

In the absences of Governor Black it has been customary for J. J. Thomas, chairman of the board's executive committee, to assume his chief's work. It is presumed that until the President names a governor or makes some other arrangement, Mr. Thomas will be in charge.

The President also has an opportunity to add another new face to the Reserve Board if he desires, since the term of Adolph C. Miller expired August 9. Mr. Miller is the only member of the board who has served on it continuously since its creation in 1914. He is a conservative Democrat and because of that there has been some gossip that he will be replaced with a "New Dealer." But whether President Roosevelt wishes to supplant Mr. Miller is undetermined.

Conservative Counselor.

Mr. Black likewise was rated a conservative Democrat and orthodox in monetary matters. He was out of sympathy with much of the "New Deal" monetary experimentation, but his differences of opinion with the President never led to an open clash. He argued strongly against many of the measures enacted—and some which were abandoned—but once the President made his decision, Mr. Black went along.

Soft-spoken, with a Southern drawl and easy manner, Mr. Black was named Governor of the Federal Reserve Board May 10, 1933, to succeed Eugene Meyer, now publisher of The Washington Post.

It was a coincidence that Mr. Meyer was in conference with President Roosevelt about two hours before the latter's luncheon appointment with Mr. Black. Senator Carter Glass, Democrat, of Virginia, also of the orthodox financial school, also was closeted with President Roosevelt during the morning. He came to request the President to address the Virginia American Legion at Lynchburg on September 3.

When Mr. Black accepted appointment to the Federal Reserve Board he expected to stay only about three months and consequently the directors of the Atlanta Federal Reserve Bank, of which he had been Governor for five years, left that place vacant in anticipation of his early return. For almost a year Mr. Black has tried to resign his post here, but on each occasion the President persuaded him to remain on a little longer.

Insists on Resigning.

Mr. Black was insistent that his resignation be accepted when he met the President for luncheon yesterday. On leaving the White House he revealed he had resigned, adding that "I got the best job in the world at Atlanta." Subsequently he announced acceptance of his new post as a liaison officer between the Administration and the banks. He said he was leaving Washington early today, but would be back frequently and might establish an office at the Federal Reserve headquarters.

The President subsequently wrote Mr. Black, expressing the "greatest reluctance" in accepting the resignation, but pointing out that "you can do much good by presenting the recovery program to the country's reserve banks, commercial banks and other financial institutions; by acquainting them with the successive steps by the Administration which have resulted in the present prosperous condition of these institutions and which make possible their greater cooperation with the Administration in its program of complete business rehabilitation."

After requesting that Mr. Black report to him frequently, President Roosevelt asserted that "the thanks of the entire country should be conveyed to you."

Planes Bring First Marines To Leave Haiti

Embarkation of Other Troops Today Ends U. S. Occupation.

Twenty-six Marine Corps fliers arrived at the Anacostia Air Station yesterday afternoon at the conclusion of a mass flight from Port au Prince, Haiti. Under the command of Maj. James T. Moore the pilots brought their 11 planes to the Capital for a review by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt and Maj. Gen. John Henry Russell, commandant of the Marine Corps.

Their arrival here signalized the end of American occupation of Haiti in accordance with a Presidential order. While the fliers were coming here the last of the regular Marine brigade under the command of Brig. Gen. Louis McCarty Little were embarking at Port au Prince on the U. S. S. Argonne and the U. S. S. Bridge for transportation to Quantico, Va.

Immediately following an inspection by Marine Corps officers from headquarters here, Maj. Moore led his squadron to Qantico, Va., where the officers and men will be placed on temporary duty pending assignment to other units. The short return trip to Quantico was made in the face of a severe wind and rain storm that swept the airport as the pilots were taking off.

In addition to Maj. Moore the officer personnel of the squadron included Capt. Louis Woods, First Lieuts. Hayne Boyden, Ira Kimes, Frank June and Ivan Miller and Second Lieuts. William Willis and Zebulon Hopkins. In addition Sergts. Millard Shepard, Gaston Davis, Harold Prince and Paul Paquin served as pilots on the trip. The remaining enlisted men made up the crews.

He said he preferred to stay in a hotel while here Saturday, instead of a club, as had been planned, and that he would hold private conversations with those who desire to confer with him.

President Aids Skyline Drive

Moves to Speed Opening After Conference With Glass and Byrd.

The year-old agitation for the opening of the Skyline Drive from Panorama to Swift Run Gap, Va., along the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains, in the Shenandoah National Park, bounded forward yesterday when President Roosevelt gave his approval for removal of gates on the Mountain Highway at a conference with Senators Glass and Byrd.

The Shenandoah Valley, Inc., and Senator Byrd have been trying to bring about the opening of the scenic mountain highway for months. President Roosevelt motored over the drive a year ago and was so captivated by his trip that he told Senator Byrd he hoped the public would be allowed to enjoy the highway as soon as possible.

Yesterday, Senators Byrd and Glass called at the White House and laid the matter of opening the drive before the President. Senator Byrd, in a message to Valley, Inc., officials yesterday, said:

"Senator Glass and I had a conference with the President today and he expressed great surprise that the Skyline Drive had not been opened. He said he favored the opening as promptly as possible and that he would personally take up this matter with Secretary Ickes. I am also communicating what the President said to Secretary Ickes, Mr. MacDonald (in charge of building the road), and Mr. Cammerer (director of National Park Service)."

Ethel Barrymore Has Birthday; Dines With Former Husband

Celebrating 55th Natal Anniversary, Says She Will Act Again.

Mamaroneck, N. Y., Aug. 15 (AP). Ethel Barrymore, celebrating her fifty-fifth birthday by dining with her divorced husband and their son, said tonight she will return to the stage this fall in "Laura Garnett."

The play, already tried out at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., with her two children, John Drew Colt and Ethel Barrymore Colt, as members of the cast, is based on the life of Isadora Duncan.

It was a coincidence that the distinguished actress dined with her former husband, Russell Griswold Colt, at her suburban home. He dines with her at Taylor's Point, where she has lived for 22 years, every Wednesday. Her daughter, Ethel, was absent—playing at a summer theater at Madison, Conn. The only other guest besides her son was Georgie Drew, a cousin.

"It's unusual for anybody to pay attention to my birthday," said the veteran of some of the Nation's best plays. "Usually, they just celebrate the birthdays of my children and mine go by unnoticed."

Chatting on the spacious porch of her manorial country home, Miss Barrymore told how she had spent the day. Attired in a black and yellow silk print frock and white shoes, she looked scarcely 40.

She had gone for a long automobile drive on Long Island. She had played 18 holes of golf—she does almost every day. It was, she said, just a routine day.

Did her former husband, Colt, remember it was her birthday? No. "He never remembers my birthday. But he always has dinner with me on Wednesday night," she said.

Ellsworth Party May Give Byrd Aid

man, he said. "It's the most sanitary place one can live, outside of a baby's incubator."

Dr. Coman will board the S. S. Mariposa at Honolulu for Auckland, New Zealand. He will travel across New Zealand by train and ferry, arriving at Dunedin before September 15, when the expedition is scheduled to start.

On board the Wyatt Earp, revamped Norwegian motorship, manned by 13 husky Norwegian sailors, each of whom holds a master's certificate, the expedition will travel to Deception Island, off Graham Land, and south of Cape Horn.

From Deception Island Ellsworth's flight, with Bernt Balchen as pilot, will be over 2,800 miles of unexplored Antarctic continent. The flight is expected to take from 22 to 26 hours.

As soon as Balchen lands the plane safely at the landing field he constructed at Little Amercia, where the fliers will be greeted by the Byrd men, the Wyatt Earp will up anchor and begin the sail around the continent and inside the ice pack to the Ross Sea, where the ship will stop at the Byrd base.

Here the Ellsworth expedition will give the pemmican to the Byrd men and then sail for home again.

Ellsworth, however, in Honolulu, asserted, "I do not intend to carry aid to the Byrd expedition. My expedition has nothing to do with that of Byrd's. Dr. Coman is my doctor, engaged by me in Baltimore. I am awaiting him because my doctor in New Zealand left me there."

Dr. Coman, in a farewell broadcast last night on the Columbia Broadcasting system's regular Wednesday night series to and from Little America, greeted his former commander and said: "If I can make it I will bring some new pemmican and new Eskimo biscuit, which will surely obviate the trouble you are having now. As you know, my interest in the progress of the Byrd expedition has been so strong that when Lincoln Ellsworth asked me to join him the other day on the cruise of the Wyatt Earp, I eagerly grasped the opportunity to get back to the Antarctic and eventually to Little America.

"Besides the food I will bring you the best wishes of your friends. I will be seeing you comparatively soon, I hope."

Storm Halts Guards' Camp Athletic Show

Remainder of Field Day Set Saturday; War Games Go On.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., Aug. 15.—Heavy thundershowers halted outside activities of the District National Guard this afternoon. Regimental field day of the 121st Engineers was near completion when the storm broke and some events were postponed until Friday. The Twenty-ninth Military Police Company and Signal Company, working in the field of operations for tomorrow's division staff maneuvers, finished their jobs in a lashing rain.

The Engineers this morning continued training in demolitions and camouflage. Roads and bridges were covered with trees and brush, hiding them from theoretical prying eyes of enemy airmen.

Winners in the field meet this afternoon were:

Three-legged race—Won by Company F team with Melvin W. Widmeyer and Arnold B. Solberg.

Equipment race—First, R. Fioramonti, Company D; G. L. Johnson, Company E; D. C. Johnson, Company F.

Half-mile race—First, George A. Cleveland, Company C; James W. Condit, Company D; Robert K. Gingrich, Company A.

Multiple relay race—Won by Company D.

Half-mile relay—Won by Company D team with James W. Condit, Edward I. Scanlon, Vincent Ceccarelli and William S. Taylor.

Events postponed until Friday include the tug of war.

New Step in War Games.

The Twenty-ninth Division staff continued work on the war games, reconnoitering through the present theater of operations. Returning to camp, the officers were required to write an order for attack of an infantry division.

The advance guards of the "blue" and "red" forces engaged in theoretical battle near Rouzerville, Pa., with the main bodies of troops speeding to their assistance. The blue forces have gained the advantage and forced the enemy from the ridges to lower ground. Tomorrow the staff, accompanied by enlisted men of the headquarters detachment, will set up offices in the field and will conduct operations under as near actual conditions as can be simulated.

Last night a kangaroo court convened in the Military Police Company, trying all recruits of the company. Those tried were Hugh D. Brooks, Irving Holaber, James C. Miller, Fred E. Parker, Harry N. Garner, A. J. Daniels, Jasper Coros, William C. Parris, C. L. Brooks, and L. G. Perry. The judge was David Epstein and officers of the court were Cliff Bailey, prosecuting attorney, and G. E. Copperthwaite, clerk of the court.

Boxing championship finals were scheduled tonight.

Sergt. Thomas J. Dawson, Headquarters and Service Company, and Privte Peter P. Panagopoulous, Military Police Company, convalescing in the Waynesboro Hospital, will be transferred to Walter Reed Hospital in Washington within the next few days. Panagopoulous suffered an acute attack of appendicitis while marching with his company about 5 miles from camp and was sent to the hospital for an immediate operation. Sergt. Dawson was injured in an automobile accident near Lewistown, Md., Sunday.

Airport Study Tour Expands

Federal Board to Visit 15 More Fields on Way to Capital.

The airports of 15 cities have been added to the itinerary of the Federal Aviation Commission's 12,000-mile inspection tour of the principal air transportation systems and air centers of the country. They are to be inspected during the commission's return East from Los Angeles, Calif., announced J. Carroll Cone, executive secretary of the commission, here yesterday.

Under the direction of Vice Chairman Edward P. Warner, four of the five members of the commission left Washington on the present inspection tour July 27, visiting a number of air centers of the South and the Caribbean area on their way to the West Coast, where they have been for the past few days.

The fifteen additional cities and air bases to be inspected while returning to Washington, where formal hearings will be opened September 17, are Sunnyvale, Calif.; Oakland, Calif.; Seattle; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Wichita, Kans.; Kansas City, Mo.; St. Louis, Chicago, Dayton, Ohio; Akron, Ohio; Detroit, Buffalo, Hartford, Conn.; New York City; Philadelphia and Cleveland.

The commission leaves Los Angeles today at 7 a. m., Pacific time.

While the American inspection is going on, Chairman Clark Howell, of the commission, is surveying air conditions abroad. Commander Jerome C. Hunsaker, who did not go all the way to the West Coast, will rejoin the group at Dayton. Other members making the flight in addition to Vice Chairman Warner are Franklin K. Lane, jr., and Albert J. Berres.

Fines Refund At Mt. Rainier Held Doubtful

No Effort on Early Cases Seen in Test Ruling at Marlboro.

Motorists who have been fined for running through Mount Rainier's traffic light may try to get their money back, if they like. But they probably won't succeed.

This much was admitted yesterday by legal experts in the District and backed by the opinion of Mount Rainier's corporation counsel, Bird H. Dolby, following a ruling by the circuit court at Marlboro, which held that the town's justice was disqualified to hear the case of Mrs. Emily G. Smith, of Washington—a test case brought in by the American Automobile Association—because his fee depended upon conviction.

"All this case means is that Mrs. Smith will get her $7 back," Mr. Dolby said. "I don't think there is a possible chance of anyone convicted in this court getting a refund. None of the old cases is affected."

Other Lawyers Agree.

Legal opinion in Washington was of the same mind. It was further pointed out that few who have been convicted would have the time or patience to go through the necessary legal proceedings.

Nevertheless, the American Automobile Association's legal staff was busily looking up precedents and engaging in other forms of research just in case Washington motorists who have had unfavorable decisions in the Mount Rainier traffic court should decide to sue for their money.

Privately one official conceded that the Marlboro court passed only on Mrs. Smith's case; that a decision would have to be obtained in all cases tried before Judge Robert E. Joyce, Mount Rainier police justice, before the split-fee system was abandoned last October and the chances of getting anything in return would be slim.

The A. A. A., however, stood ready to assist complainants.

A. A. A. Pushes Fight.

"The District of Columbia division of the A. A. A.," declared its executive vice president, Ernest N. Smith, "is determined to use all its resources to fight up to the Supreme Court of the United States, if necessary, cases involving fee-splitting constables and justices in territory adjacent to the National Capital.

"Our attorneys are now studying the text of the circuit court's decision with the view of advising motorists who have been fined in Joyce's court as to whether they may expect to recover fines and, if so, what steps are necessary. They also will study the decision to ascertain what bearing it may have on the validity of the new ordinance at Mount Rainier."

Under an ordinance passed by the town council last October, the justice and arresting officer are paid $1.50 and $1.75, respectively, regardless of whether a conviction is obtained.

Group to Map New Jobs Drive

Committee Plans Meeting With Street Today.

Plans for finding thousands of jobs for District unemployed are to be discussed at a meeting of the special unemployment committee appointed by Commissioner George E. Allen to be held in the office of Elwood street, director of public welfare, at 11 a. m. today.

Minimum wages for domestics and other help are to be considered by the committee. Efforts to inspire the "hiring urge" probably will feature the campaign which will be launched early in September.

Finding jobs for the 15,000 employables among the 20,000 on District relief rolls is the principal purpose of the employment drive. All organized agencies are to be enlisted in the drive to find jobs.

Doug Fairbanks Debarks; Silent On Heart Affairs

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—Suave and debonair as ever, Douglas Fairbanks came home today after 14 months' sojourn abroad, steadfast in his refusal to discuss a possible reconciliation with "America's Sweetheart," Mary Pickford.

To innumerable questions aboard the liner Rex he parried with:

"My private life is my own. I will not discuss it."

Whether about Miss Pickford or about Lady Sylvia Ashley, the London society matron, with whose name his was frequently coupled, the attitude of the movie actor was one of complete detachment.

A shrug of the shoulders, a quick smile on a deeply tanned face and then the inevitable:

"Please, please * * * there is nothing I can say."

Fairbanks—the picture of sophistication and the personification of Bond street sartorial splendor—was shown a batch of newspaper stories from Hollywood, all to the effect that Mary said she planned to meet Doug there soon.

Silently he pocketed them all. A bit later, he said:

"If you don't mind, I'll read them all later."

He plans to fly tomorrow to Denver to attend the funeral of a sister-in-law, Mrs. John Fairbanks. Then he goes on to Hollywood.

Holdup Confession Said to Involve 3

Robbery of Gas Station in Rosslyn Cleared.

The holdup of a Sunoco gas station in Rosslyn, Va., five weeks ago was cleared last night by detectives who reported a confession implicating three white men.

Lawrence T. Tinsman, 22, of 3516 M street northwest, allegedly told detectives that he committed the holdup with James C. Tood, 21, and William G. Smith, 22, of the same address. Smith denied he had participated in the robbery.

Tinsman and Todd also admitted, according to police, they had robbed three stores.

Taxicab Evils Demand Code, Says Roberts

People's Counsel Attacks "Grave Abuses" of Rental System.

The "disorganized, unsatisfactory conditions" in the taxicab business in Washington demand adoption of a corrective code, William A. Roberts, people's counsel, said at a taxicab code hearing at National Recovery Administration headquarters yesterday.

"If there was ever an industry which has demonstrated the need of governmental attention and supervision in order to relieve unemployment and improve the standards of labor, it is the transportation of passengers for hire in taxicabs," Mr. Roberts said.

"In the District of Columbia we have had for the past four years an illustration of an industry utterly disorganized and of labor utterly subservient. This is not entirely due to the operators themselves. In Washington the taxicab industry was in the hands of two or three major companies which operated large fleets of 'built-for-the-purpose' cabs at rates which were generally considered excessive. Frequent efforts were made on behalf of the public to reduce these rates without success. Other grievances of the public included the monopoly of hotel stands and of Union Station facilities.

"It is well known to all who are here that the most grave abuses of the personnel employed in the taxicab industry have arisen by reason of the rental system of operation."

Mr. Roberts quoted the decision of Justice Jesse C. Adkins, of the District Supreme Court, criticizing the present flat-rat zone taxicab fares in the District.

Mr. Roberts attacked the sales policy of two automobile companies which, he said, had helped to bring about the present conditions. These conditions "sell" taxicabs to drivers.

Labor Seeks Wages Equal To Living Cost

Green to Ask Revision of Codes Increasing Minimums.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 15 (AP). Apprehensive over the prospect of an increase in the cost of living, the executive council of the American Federatoin of Labor announced today it would make every effort to keep wages apace with rising prices.

William Green, federation president, said labor would seek revision of the codes of fair competition so that minimum wage scales will be increased according to "the needs of the situation."

The council, foreseeing also an increase in Federal relief rolls because of conditions in the drought-stricken areas of the West, decided to urge Federal authorities to substitute another CWA program for direct relief.

Rising Prices Expected.

Green said the council, after discussing at length the effect the drought would have on the working man, was "gravely apprehensive" of its economic aspects. Rising prices are expected, Green said, in canned goods, vegetables and other farm products, cotton and wool.

"If the cost of living is to be affected," Green said, "it seems proper and just that wages should be lifted to a higher level. We propose to make plans to meet the situation as best we can so that the working population will not be compelled to suffer from this changed economic situation."

Green said labor "must unite effectively to build up wage standards" to meet rising prices. Asked if that meant there was a possibility of many strikes this winter, Green replied:

"No, not at all. We want to avoid strikes."

Will Take Plea to Capital.

As soon as the present sessions of the council are finished, probably Saturday, Green said a formal request would be made to officials at Washington to inaugurate another CWA program.

The council, considering the proposed reorganization of the NRA, expressed itself as opposed to any plan "which contemplates extension of the power of private industry over the NRA or the Administration of the NRA."

"We hold," Green said, "that the interests of wage earners can only be protected through governmental Administration of the NRA. Should the Administration be turned over to industry, labor would be placed at the mercy of powerful employers' interests."

Lightning Fires Two Barns, Silo

Westminster, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.). Fire caused by lightning at widely scattered points in Carroll County today destroyed two barns and a silo at an estimated loss of more than $12,000.

A barn on the farm owned by Martin D. Hess and tenanted by Luther Harner, near Taney Town, was destroyed with loss estimated at $5,000, partly covered by insurance. Firemen were hampered by lack of water, but saved adjoining buildings.

Near Eldersburg, a barn and silo on the farm of Tom Kinnerman, of Baltimore, was destroyed. The cattle were saved, but hay, straw, threshed barley and machinery were burned.

'Kissing and Petting' Motorist Draws Fire of Secret Spotter

Maryland Driver Is Cited for Menacing Traffic on Public Street.

The sentimental side of motoring was injected into the traffic safety campaign of the Secret Committee of 100 Observers yesterday.

In one of the most unusual citations since the campaign began an observer reported a Maryland driver for "kissing and petting" as he guided his car down a public thoroughfare.

The incident occurred on lower Pennsylvania avenue during the early morning traffic jam, the observer reported.

"With every kiss the automobile swerved from traffic," asserted the observer.

He stated that automobiles were forced to stop suddenly numerous times by the "affectionate" motorist. A card informing him that he had been guilty of reckless driving was sent the person to whom the Maryland license was registered.

In all, 33 traffic violations were reported by the committee yesterday.

Single Safety Car for Police

No More "Voice" Equipment Now, Commissioner Hazen Rules.

There will be just one "voice of safety" on Washington streets unless automobiles now owned by the police department can be equipped as "voices" without much additional expense, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen ruled yesterday.

The Commissioner's ruling was in response to a proposal from Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to purchase two more automobiles and paint them white and equip them to act as additional "voices" of safety.

He has been impressed by the results of the safety campaign which has included use of an unidentified committee of 100 unofficial observers and the "voice of safety" automobile of the traffic bureau, the Commissioner said. He had not received any complaint from those thrown into the toils of the law by the reports of the committee of 100, the Commissioner said.

Former Net Star Sued for $50,000

Beat and Refused to Wed Her, Girl Charges.

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—A suit asking $50,000 damages for alleged breach of promise and assault was filed in Superior Court today against Lucian E. Williams, Chicago stock broker and former Big Ten tennis champion.

The action was brought by Miss Irene Margaret Boyce, 22, Chicago. She claims Williams promised to marry her, that they went together for five years with that understanding and that last June 1 Williams struck her. On August 12, she charges, Williams beat her and refused to marry her.

This is the second assault suit pending against Williams. A $50,000 suit was filed in Superior Court last February by Miss Elizabeth Cornell, Chicago, and is still awaiting trial.

40,000 Aids To Push FERA Literacy Drive

Williams Reveals Scope of Huge Campaign in Autumn.

A total of 40,000 teachers are to be put to work by the Federal Government in a major campaign to stamp out illiteracy.

Acting Administrator Aubrey Williams of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration announced yesterday the jobs for teachers will be provided through State and local relief agencies with funds advanced by the Government.

None of the Federal funds may be used, however, to pay regular school teachers or to employ new teachers in the regular schools in order to relieve crowded conditions, officials pointed out.

A five-point program has been mapped by FERA officials for the fall educational campaign. It includes:

Literacy classes.
Vocational training.
Vocational rehabilitation.
General adult education.
Nursery schools.

"Literacy classes are to be organized in every community where the need for such classes exists and where a sufficient number of adults who can not now read and write can be interested in the program," Mr. Williams said.

The educational program was expected by officials to reach 2,000,000 persons whose educational requirements are not now met by State and city educational facilities.

Emphasis will be placed on the vocational phase of the educational program with the aim of providing useful education for unemployed adult workers.

The vocational schooling will be split into five classifications, providing training for industrial workers, housewives, agricultural workers, commercial groups and finally a course in "vocational adjustment."

While designed not to overlap work being done by the States for the physically handicapped, the FERA program does contemplate establishment of vocational classes for this class of workers who require additional training.

Bible Group Lines Up for Clean Movies

Dr. E. B. Paisley Admits Value of Pictures but Asks Control.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—With only one dissenting vote, the several hundred persons assembled at the Massenetta Springs Bible Conference voted today to join the Legion of Decency in the national drive for cleaner motion pictures. The action was taken as individuals and not as members of any organized church.

This vote came after Dr. E. B. Paisley, president of the Presbyterian Assembly Training School at Richmond, read a paper on "The Movies and Our Children" at the round table on moral and social problems. Dr. Paisley, in discussing the question, said: "We need no apology in bringing this subject to the attention of this conference. It is a problem which vitally affects the life of the youth of our nation.

"I believe," he said, "that the church as such should strive to educate its members as to the evils of the movies, but should leave the type of action to be taken to its individual members. The organization should be civic instead of ecclesiastical." He mentioned that the Legion of Decency was sponsored by the Roman Catholics, the Central Council of Jewish Rabbis and the Federal Council of Churches.

Dr. Paisley declared that there is a real value to motion pictures which "we can not dispute." Someone has said, he added, that the motion pictures are a boon to society, second only to the art of preaching, if second it is. The entertainment or amusement value of the screen must be considered, he emphasized, pointing out that 115,000,000 persons view the pictures each week.

"We must consider the movies for their educational and instructional value," said Dr. Paisley. "Now as to the evils: The movies are made for their financial returns. We have had a wave of delinquency in our land in late years. Have the movies caused it? After a careful study of all aspects of the movies it was found that the major themes of the movies dealt with crime, sex and love. Face to face with the indisputable value of the motion pictures we are face to face with the indisputable evil of the movies. What are the remedies?

"We could say we would absolutely do away with them, but we are not going to do that and it would not be wise to do it in view of the good they can do. We might say that the movies are so evil that they should be banned by the church. The best suggestion, however, is that we control them in some way that their production will not be evil. Many advocate a Federal bureau of control which would work within the industry itself to the end that the productions comply with the league of moral standards."

Ickes Accepts Deeds to Park

Residents of Shenandoah Must Leave Area, Secretary Orders.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes yesterday accepted deeds for the Shenandoah National Park from the State of Virginia with reservations, one of which is that residents of the park area evacuate.

William E. Carson, chairman of the Virginia State Commission on Conservation and Development, presented the deeds to Secretary Ickes, who immediately turned them over to the Department of Justice for checking.

Mr. Ickes made it clear he expects Virginia to see that residents leave before the Interior Department's National Park Service formally establishes the national park.

The park covers between 160,000 and 170,000 acres. The Bureau of Public Roads is building a scenic road near Luray, to be known as Skyland drive. Park officials said this will be completed early in the fall.

30 Kanawha Democrats Contest Returns.

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Thirty of the 76 Democratic candidates for Kanawha County seats in the State House of Delegates today began formulating plans for contesting the returns from the recent State-wide primary election.

Action followed organization of the "Roosevelt Honest Election League," with the appointment of a committee to advise with other defeated candidates in filing demands for recounts. Samuel E. Bowen was elected president and Julius A. Degruyter, jr., member of the House of Delegates at the last session, treasurer. A resolution calling for the resignation of Robert G. Kelly, Charleston lawyer, as Democratic State chairman for "naming a slate of hand-picked candidates to be nominated at the primary," also was adopted.

Degruyter today said he had employed a policeman to guard the ballots at the courthouse pending completion of the county court canvass, which is expected tomorrow and which shows Braxton Davenport and John E. Amos fighting for the eighth place in the House nominations.

Two Hagerstown Firemen Are Injured During Running Races.

Several Thousand Seek Shelter as Storm Halts Events.

By W. H. Shryock.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 15.—Two Hagerstown, Md., firemen were injured here this afternoon during running races at the thirty-third annual Cumberland Valley Firemen's Association convention.

John Hoover, Junior Hose Company, was taken to the Waynesboro Hospital with possible internal injuries suffered when a 600-pound truck pulled by comrades passed over him as he slipped on the rain-soaked street.

Joe Stuck, also a Junior, suffered an injured foot when he slipped while crossing the finish line in the hose race and the reel wagon passed over him. He suffered brush burns on his side.

A rainstorm halted the races shortly after 3 p. m. The hose race was won by the Junior Company of Hagerstown with Hose No. 5, Martinsburg, W. Va., second. The Good Will Company, Chambersburg, third. Awards of $100 and $50 will go to winners of first and second, respectively.

The hook and ladder race and drill contest was postponed until tomorrow morning.

Several thousand spectators lining the street scurried to shelter when the rainstorm broke. Many concession stands along Main street were ruined. The feature parade tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. will contain 15 bands and drum corps with fire companies, apparatus, floats and civic organizations from four States.

Greencastle, Pa., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—More than 100 citizens have contributed to a fund for a flag and stand for use in parades by the Rescue Hose Company.

Replica of Ark Is Slightly Damaged By Bolt Stunning 3

Baltimore, Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Workmen today examined the Ark, replica of the sailing ship which brought the first Maryland colonists to the Potomac River, and reported a lightning bolt that struck the ship's foremast yesterday had caused only slight damage.

Three men were stunned by the bolt, which followed the mast down to the deck and bowled over the victims. They were Capt. Andrew Johnson, of Solomons Island; Richard Powell, a sailor, and James Kellner, a guide. None was resiously hurt.

The Ark was brought to Baltimore as an exhibit during the Tercentenary regatta of the Maryland Yacht Club. The vessel, with her sister ship, the Dove, was a feature of the Maryland Tercentenary Celebration at St. Marys City last June.

Four men were thrown into Chesapeake Bay late yesterday when a log canoe they were sailing was keeled over by a strong gust of wind. They are Daniel B. Chambers, son of former State Senator Chambers; Fred Wardenhols, Grant Stiner and Olaf Nelson. They remained afloat until the Ericsson Line steamer John Cadwalader picked them up.

Richmond Merchants Hit Big Relief Funds

Viewing Benefits as Temporary They Cite Survey Showing Mounting Aid Demands Despite Decrease in Jobless.

By C. B. Carr.

Richmond, Aug. 15.—That the huge expenditure of "relief" money by the Federal Government will not provide a permanent rehabilitation of the country from the effects of the depression, is an opinion freely expressed in business circles here.

There are said to be many reasons which prompt a number of business men to hold the idea that the "relief" work is only making conditions temporarily better. It is pointed out that a recent survey of unemployment conditions in seven major cities of Virginia indicated that one-ninth of their population was on relief rolls.

Another factor of the relief situation which Richmond business men take seriously is the fact that each relief project is followed by another similar project. They point out that the Government found it necessary to back up the work of the PWA with the CWA and then the FERA.

Explaining their contention that they did not believe relief work was a permanent cure for depression, a number of business men here cited that the unemployment survey showed that while unemployment was being reduced, the demand for relief was proportionately greater than the reduction in the ranks of the unemployed. As a result of the increase in demand for relief work, a survey conducted in Richmond, Norfolk, Roanoke, Lynchburg, Danville, Petersburg and Charlottesville is said to have shown that despite the fact that the Roosevelt relief measures have been in effect about a year, the number on such relief rolls varied from 1 out of every 13 persons in Charlottesville to 1 in every 8 persons in Richmond.

Policy as Whole Applauded.

Thse same business men will admit, however, that some phases of business have shown a substantial increase during the past year.

As a whole the Roosevelt policies have been well received by Richmond's industry, it is pointed out. In two cases, however, those regarding the operation of an NRA code, the New Deal policy is said to have met with much opposition. The dissatisfaction appears to hinge around a change in provisions of the code in one instance and minimum wage schedules in the other.

The Richmond cleaners and dyers claim they entered into a code of fair competition only to learn within a short while that the price schedule for work done had been scrapped while the wage and hour provisions remained. This change, they declare, has resulted in the cutting of prices by some members on a scale similar to the pre-code days.

Another example of NRA code difficulties hinges around the denial by State NRA authorities of a plea by the Milhiser Bag Co., of Richmand, for exemption from minimum wage provisions of the textile code. An official of the Milhiser Co. has declared that if the NRA code wage provision is enforced a number of elderly persons will be thrown out of work, the company having for some time paid at the rate of job lots of 1,000 bags in contrast to the NRA code rate of 30 cents an hour. Many elderly persons, who could not hold other positions, are employed by the bag company to make bags in their own homes. A hearing on the matter of code wages exemption for the Milhiser Co. is to be held in Washington.

Politics Are Quiet.

On the political horizon, the situation is unusually quiet. Politicians, however, point out that the "fireworks" may soon get under way, the Republicans having called a district convention to meet here tomorrow night to nominate a Congressional candidate.

The Republicans' opponent for Representative Andrew Jackson Montague, of Richmond, Democrat, appears a problem for even the most astute Republican observer. Among those who have been mentioned are Col. Henry W. Anderson, Aubrey Hawkins, A. Douglas Smith, jr., and Roy Cabell.

In former years Mr. Montague has had a strong hold upon the district. This year, it appears, he will be unable to make an active campaign due to an illness. Mr. Montague has been a stanch supporter of New Deal measures. His popularity in the district and with the Administration is believed in prominent Democratic quarters to have saved him a fight within his own ranks for the party's nomination this year.

However, some of the party leaders point out, Mr. Montague is advancing in years. When Mr. Montague steps aside, many Democrats predict a fight within the party ranks for the seat, unless the House member has built up an organization sufficiently strong to designate his successor.

According to well-informed circles, Richmond Democrats, who hold the "balance of power" in the district, are divided into two camps—one led by John J. Wicker, jr., State manager of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and the other by Clyde Saunders, Richmond postmaster.

Among those who have been prominently mentioned as possible Congressional timber are Hunsden Cary, Dave E. Satterfield, jr., Ashton Dovell, of Williamsburg; Mayor J. Fulmer Bright, Richmond.

In addition to Richmond, the Third District includes Williamsburg and the counties of Charles City, Chesterfield, Hanover, Henrico, James City, King William and New Kent.

Culpeper, Va., August 15 (Spl.).—Arrangements are going forward for the annual three-day Culpeper County Fair Association opening, September 1.

Fireworks and horse racing will be featured. Free acts and the usual carnival concessions will be held each day.

Fugitive Is Held For Berkeley Springs

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—State Trooper J. M. Johnson and Deputy Sheriff L. M. Yost, of Morgan County, are expected back this week from Vicksburg, Miss., with Aaron Kesecker, who escaped from jail here, where he was being held in connection with the theft of bonds from the residence of C. E. Householder here.

Kesecker was taken into custody when he gave reference at a Federal relief headquarters in Vicksburg.

Highway Fund Distribution To Be Studied

Controversial Question Faces Virginia Commission.

Richmond, Aug. 15 (AP).—A study of the primary highway system situation and the controversial subject of an "equitable distribution of funds," is one of the big tasks left for a legislative commission to work on by the 1934 General Assembly.

This study was listed by William R. Shands, director of the bureau of legislative drafting and research today as he compiled a list of commissions which probably will begin meetings and hearings in the early fall.

The highway study commission thus far is incomplete, so far as the personnel is concerned. Gov. Peery has not named the two members left for his selection. Assemblymen members are Delegates Spiers, Daughton and George, and Senators Rogers and Shumate.

The resolution calling for the commission specified that it is to study and ascertain the uncompleted roads, bridges and projects in the present primary highway system, and approximate the amount probably necessary for completion; study and ascertain what other roads, bridges and projects should be brought into the system, and the money necessary for construction and acquisition, and study and report to the next regular session of the Legislature its findings on an "equitable distribution of funds."

The last problem has been a subject of controversy in the General Assembly for several sessions. The western section has contended it has been penalized, so far as primary system mileage is concerned on account of the high cost of mountain road construction, while the flat sections of the east have far more mileage. Eastern representatives have contended that numerous rivers and streams are not yet bridged and, therefore, they are no better off than those in the mountains.

Baltimore Fire Wrecks Church

Lightning Starts Blaze and Kills Man.

Baltimore, Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Fire, resulting from a bolt of lightning which crashed into the roof of Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church, in East Baltimore, wrecked the edifice today and injured one fireman.

As the storm raged, an unidentified man was killed by lightning as he stood in a group of a dozen persons. Others in the group were stunned, but escaped serious injury.

The church fire was one of the most spectacular in many years. Flames leaped high in the air, enveloping the 100-foot steeple, and residents were ordered to vacate adjoining houses. The new $10,000 organ in the church was destroyed. Lightning bolts struck at a score of other points, causing minor damage.

CCC Contract Award Held Up Pending Code Violation Probe

Baltimore Firm Accused of Price Infraction by Competitor.

Baltimore, Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Award of millwork bids for CCC camps in the Third Corps Area, U. S. Army, have been withheld, it was learned today, pending investigation of an alleged violation of the retail lumber code by the Maryland Lumber Co., of this city.

In a letter to the quartermaster, the Retail Lumber and Building Material Code Authority in Baltimore, District 11, requested that the award be held up pending an immediate check on a complaint made against the company by E. C. Snyder, of Harrisburg, Pa.

The bids, due August 8, were for millwork on CCC camps at Oakland, Md.; Rose Hill, Va.; Clinchport, Va.; Cleveland, Va.; Chatham, Va.; Big Pool, Md.; Johnstown, Pa., and Cambridge, Md.

According to the code authority, the bid of the Maryland Lumber Co. was in "apparent violation of retail lumber code on several counts." It is understood the major complaint was that minimum prices established by the code had been violated.

The company submitted the low bid on six out of eight jobs among 32 companies. Their bid was $594.34 on each of eight jobs, while the bid of the complainant varied from $877.90 to $925.51.

Stating that the complaint had been referred to the Secretary of War, a letter to bidders yesterday from the Executive Committee Code Authority, Philadelphia, said a hearing will be held in Baltimore this week.

FERA Adult Training Plans Are Discussed

Educators of Three States and District Confer at Charlottesville.

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 15.—FERA educational supervisors, school officials, and emergency teachers from Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia today held discussions on vocational training and home economics at the FERA training institute in session at the University of Virginia.

Dr. J. C. Wright, assistant commissioner of vocational education for the United States Office of Education, told the group the emergency schools for adults "filled the gap between loss of job and job regained."

Through these schools, Dr. Wright pointed out, the efficiency and morale of workers may be maintained during periods of temporary inactivity.

He warned against allowing unemployed men and women to fall behind in their professions, and in so doing "lose job pride and sink below the surface."

Homemaking Work Discussed.

Martha Creighton, supervisor of home economics for the Virginia Department of Education, directed this afternoon's session devoted to reports and studies of the better homemaking program carried on during the past year among underprivileged families.

Miss Creighton outlined the courses conducted last year by 50 teachers for 2,500 women in the State. She suggested that teachers in the new program look into the homes to find what is most needed in planning their work, and advised that first concern be given to families on direct relief.

Mrs. E. K. Bibb, director of the Bristol school, told of practical courses in homemaking carried on there among stricken families. The success of the school, she said, was aided by the cooperation of community civic and official groups. Much of the running expense was defrayed by selling products made in classroom work.

Tells of Service Plan.

The operation of the Citizens Service Exchange in Richmond was explained by Mrs. George W. Guy, secretary of the citizens service council there. In addition to collecting food, clothing, fuel and other necessities for the needy, Mrs. Guy said unemployed men and women were given an opportunity to work for the things most needed.

Bertha Williams, home economics teacher on Tangier Island, in the Chesapeake Bay, told of her work among 1,500 people nearly shut off from the outside world. It was said that she sponsored the introduction of the lone cow on the island, described as one of the most inaccessible of Virginia's offshore possessions.

Other speakers on the program were Dr. W. S. Newman, of the Virginia Department of Agriculture, who talked on emergency education in agriculture; Mrs. Mary Johnston Gould, of Farmville, who spoke on vocational activities for rural communities, and Alice Wellingford, of Princeton, W. Va., who reported on social work in Mercer County, W. Va.

Rain and Hail Hit Frederick

Torrent Floods Streets and Lightning Destroys Barn.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—A storm almost equal to a cloudburst, accompanied by wind and hail, broke over Frederick this afternoon and for 45 minutes rain came down in torrents. North Market street, the principal business thoroughfare, was flooded from building to building and a number of cellars were partly filled with water. Lightning struck the barn on the farm of Calvin Hall, of Washington, tenanted by I. Myrtle Dutrow, 3 miles east of here, and destroyed the building, together with its contents of hay, grain and farm machinery, with a loss of about $7,000.

Fire supposed to have started from spontaneous combustion shortly before the storm destroyed a large barn and its contents of 100 tons of hay, 40 hogs and a quantity of wheat, feed and farm implements on the farm of H. M. Spahr, near Lewistown. A wagon shed and straw stack also were destroyed. Firemen from Frederick and Thurmont saved the slightly damaged house and adjoining buildings. The loss is estimated at about $5,000.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—A hail, wind and rain storm striking the vicinity of Clearbrook, about 10 miles north of here, late today caused undetermined damage to the growing apple crop, leveled trees and damaged a building. Growers believe the damage to the apple crop will not exceed $5,000. Shade trees on a dozen farms of the section were damaged, some being blown down. At the Brucetown Woolen Mills a corner of the building was damaged by the high wind.

HOWARD W. JACKSON, Mayor of Baltimore, yesterday officially withdrew from the Maryland Democratic gubernatorial contest when in a letter to the secretary of state at Annapolis he asked that his certificate of candidacy and the accompanying check for $270 be returned to him.

City Officials Drop Censure Of Fair Heads

Fredericksburg Council Abandons Action on Carnival.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Expected action condemning the Fredericksburg Fair Association for booking a carnival for its fair here September 11 to 15 was abandoned by the city council last night. H. K. Sweetser, association president, declared cancellation of the contract would make the association liable for suit.

The association was criticized for including a carnival in the annual show in an informal resolution adopted Monday night.

Cooperation with Stafford County in banning private carnivals from the edge of Fredericksburg's city limits has been postponed by the Spotsylvania County supervisors' board pending discussion with Fredericksburg and Stafford officials.

Stafford County recently enacted ordinances forbidding carnivals within the county limits.

Last night's meeting was the last gathering of the present council. The new council, elected in the spring, will meet for the first time September 1. Mayor R. J. Payne last night expressed appreciation to L. G. Roach and W. A. Bell, retiring councilmen, for their work.

The council authorized City Manager L. G. Houston, jr., to invite the League of Virginia Municipalities to hold its annual convention here in 1935.

Youth on Beach Party Drowns

Had Fought Efforts of Girl Companion to Rescue Him.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Richard Mason, 18, drowned last night while swimming at Fairview Beach.

Although an inexpert swimmer, Mason struck out for a pier in the dimly lit water with Miss Aline Rowe, of Fredericksburg. Becoming suddenly exhausted, he hysterically beat off Miss Rowe's efforts to rescue him.

Artificial respiration, continued for three hours, failed to revive him. The water where Mason was last seen was scarcely over his head, witnesses said, and by taking a few strokes toward shore he could have touched bottom.

Mason is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Mason; a brother, Garnett E. Mason, and three sisters, Mary, Abbie Florence and Helen Josephine Mason.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow.

Breckenridge, service officer; Miss Maria Copeland, historian; the Rev. D. Campbell Mayers, chaplain; Vincenzo Raneri, sergeant at arms; Stilson H. Hall, athletic officer, and James di Zerega, publicity officer.

The executive committee is composed of Wilbur C. Hall and J. Terry Hirst.

Luray, Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Maynard Stoneberger, 30, for the last four years a musical broadcaster of Washington, died last night near Stanley.

His wife and two children survive. Stoneberger was known as the guitar wonder of Page County. He was a member of the Gondolier String Orchestra Club, of Washington.

Conley Victory Is Forecast as Jackson Quits

Retirement of Mayor Leaves Doctor Only Rival of Ritchie.

Baltimore, August 15 (Spl.).—Jubilant at the withdrawal of Mayor Howard W. Jackson from the Democratic gubernatorial fight, backers of Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, were declaring today that the Frederick County physician is now in a position to give Governor Ritchie a real fight for the nomination.

With Mr. Jackson out of the picture, the Conley backers see a general swing to Dr. Conley of all opponents of a fifth term for Gov. Ritchie.

Pausing today in Baltimore on his way from his home in Frederick to the Eastern Shore, where he spoke tonight, Dr. Conley said Mayor Jackson had done the right thing in dropping out of the race. A divided opposition to the Governor, Dr. Conley said, would have made a Ritchie success in the primary election almost certain.

"I started out to beat Ritchie and now I am more confident than ever that it will be done," he said.

Baltimore Ignored.

The doctor has been concentrating his fight in the counties and has paid only passing attention to Baltimore, which is regarded as a Ritchie stronghold.

Dr. Conley is the sole remaining opponent of Gov. Ritchie's fifth-term aspirations. The Ritchie forces refuse to concede him a chance of nomination, and have even decided not to oppose the doctor in his home county of Frederick, on the theory that Ritchie does not need the Frederick County votes. There is a belief in the Ritchie fold, however, that the Governor may win the county even without an organization fight.

Dr. Conley will return to the Western Shore tomorrow and will spend the remainder of the week campaigning in southern Maryland.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—The first woman to file for nomination here is Miss Arita Snyder, Keedysville, seeking the Republican nomination for the House of Delegates.

Miss Snyder is president of the Conley-for-Governor Club of Washington County, and has spent much time studying legal procedure in Washington.

Four Democrats Seek Allegany Board Posts

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—At least four Democrats will enter the race for county commissioner nominations in Allegany County.

Edward R. Neff, retired merchant, this city, was the first to announce. Mr. Neff is prominent in sportsmen's circles, being an ardent hunter and angler. John G. Shearer, former city commissioner, who is a member of the present board, will be a candidate.

Mr. Shearer was appointed to the board by Gov. Ritchie, following the death of Henry A. Bachman, Republican. Mr. Shearer, former student of St. John's College, was prominent in athletics at that institution. He served a term in the Maryland House of Delegates.

Michael J. Byrnes, city councilman, Frostburg, is also a candidate. Mr. Byrnes has repeatedly been elected to the Frostburg council and is now police and fire commissioner of that city.

Myles J. Stakem, who was chairman of the Allegany County Board of Road Directors, previous to its abolishment, announced himself today. He is a former mayor of Midland, where he has been in business several years. He belongs to one of the most widely connected families in the county.

Oakland, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Hugh Carey McMahon, of Garrett County, who announced last week as an independent candidate for the State Senate, stated today that he is opposed to any married woman whose husband is engaged in a gainful occupation holding any position in the public schools.

Mr. McMahon, a World War veteran and a cousin of the late Marquis Patric de McMahon, brigadier general in the French army, also favors the repeal of all dry laws in Garrett County.

Brady Enters Contest To Succeed Himself

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—olitical developments in Anne Arundel County today included the filing of certificate of candidacy by State's Attorney A. Theodore Brady, Democrat, who will seek reelection for a fourth term of four years.

Brady is regarded as the candidate of the regular organization forces, which backed him in former campaigns.

Other filings included Charles F. Lee, Democrat, prominent in local real estate circles, for county commissioner from the Third District; Ephraim R. Shawn, Republican, insurance man of West Annapolis, for commissioner from the Second District, and Eliza B. Fletcher, colored, Republican, for central committee.

Program Is Arranged By Junior Democrats

Frederick, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—An all-day picnic and dance under the auspices of the Frederick County Junior Democratic Club, Alton Y. Bennett, president, will be held at Braddock Heights August 30.

The program will include boxing, speedball game between teams representing Francis Scott Key Post, American Legion, and the Democratic Club, marathon race, pie-eating contest and other features.

Capital Hits Half Million In Population

ures, was not taken into consideration by the Census Bureau in arriving at its estimate.

In 1930 there were 68,510 Federal employes in the District, according to the commission. The official census for that year was 486,869. Four years later the civil service list has increased to 87,196, while the total estimated population has gone up only 10,000.

On July 1, 1933, the estimated population was 495,000, which means that the Census Bureau credited the Capital with gaining a mere 2,000 residents in the succeeding 12 months.

Of course, emergency workers brought here by New Deal dreams aren't the only factor in determining population increases, civic leaders concede, but they are confident that the well-known city on the Potomac's left bank is comfortably over the half million hurdle.

"Why, it's even indicated by these department store figures," said Shaw.

He proceeded to quote statistics showing that July sales were 22 per cent over those for July, 1933, and that the total department store sales for the first seven months of this year were 18.8 per cent higher than for the corresponding period in 1933.

Outstrips Other Cities.

For the country as a whole, the increase was only 3 per cent in July and 16 per cent for the first seven months, said Shaw. The July gains in Baltimore and Richmond were 11 per cent below Washington's.

There are approximately 150,000 persons outside the city limits who transact daily business and do their buying in Washington, said Shaw.

The Merchants and Manufacturers official predicted that Washington will hold its gain even after the emergency agencies have closed.

"After the war," he reminded, "Washington fell off for a time but soon recaptured its population losses. It is reasonable to believe that many of the Government employes holding temporary jobs will continue to live here even after their present duties expire."

Here's the reason no account was taken of the New Deal negira (AAA, NRA, PWA, PHA, HOLC, etc.) when the Census Bureau computed its 1934 estimate for the District of Columbia:

"The estimated increase in the United States population is computed each year upon the available birth, death, immigration and emigration data," says the bureau. Unusual shifting of population, such as has been focused on the Capital since administrations changed, is not recognized.

Here's How It's Done.

If you are interested further in how estimates are reached, read on:

"This increase is then distributed to the States according to the per cent each State increase, 1920 to 1930, was of the United States increase, 1920 to 1930. Each State increase is then distributed to the counties of that State according to the per cent the county increase was of the State increase, and the county increase thus obtained is distributed to the various cities in each county by the same method."

That's all there is to it.

MY DOG STORY

The Post invites its readers to send in their favorite dog stories, accompanied, if possible, by a photograph. The stories should be true ones, and not more than 250 words in length. A weekly prize of $10 will be paid for the best contribution.

By Mrs. Nettie C. Timmerman, 635 East Capitol street.

This is a true story of a little dog's love and sense of responsibility that some human fathers might well emulate.

Pete and True Love were a pair of poodle dogs and the very best of pals until the quintuplets arrived, and then poor daddy Pete was thrown to the wolves. True Love would not let him go near the pups, and fiercely challenged every effort he made to seem one of the family. Fathers have no rights in Dogdom.

However, the care of so many babies proved too much for the little mother, and when they were 12 days old she laid the burden down, and daddy dog took it up. He would stand in the doorway and watch me trying to feed them from a bottle, but he didn't think much of it, and he would rush downstairs, calling pitifully for the mother to come back. He thought they were starving, and it broke his heart.

One day I gave him a chicken leg down in the kitchen. He played with it a bit, and suddenly it occurred to him that the pups might like it. He took it upstairs and put it in their basket, then at a safe distance he crouched down, giving them time to eat it.

Presently he went back to the basket and when he found they had not eaten, he put his head on his paws and cried heart-brokenly. So did I.

Verily, who can plumb the depths of a dog's love, which seems almost divine?

By Dorothy Evans, 3736 Military road northwest.

Mate is an Irish setter, 6 years old and still acting very much like a naughty puppy, having been very much spoiled, due to his inveigling and lovable disposition.

Mate is never happier than when all his family are assembled about him, and most miserable when any of them goes away. As soon as Mate sees the traveling bag brought out, he creeps away sadly depressed, and sulks during the whole procedure of packing.

One day we were all nicely packed, and had gone to attend to some other things, and on coming back found our room in deplorable shape.

We had closed our bags, and Mate, thinking to stop our going, had gotten into them, strewing our clothes all over the place.

Mate was nowhere to be seen. Finally we found him in the guest room, under the bed, all doubled up, with one of our sweaters under his head. For this bit of retrieving we were very much tempted to scold him. But instead we learned the lesson he had taught us, to close our bags in the future.

By M. T. Leech, 1359 Columbia road northwest.

Christmas Eve, 1932, our Scotch terrier had returned from his daily walk, and we noticed he went under the table in the living room and was very quiet.

After calling him several times, he growled, and on closer examination we discovered he had found a dollar bill while out walking, and it was with difficulty we persuaded him to part with it.

He had never seen a piece of money before, and at 6 years of age it is still a mystery why he should have picked it up, unless he is just a real Scotchman.

1,000 Watch Marshall Hall Jousting Test

Frank S. Barnes, Who Took Part 47 Years Ago, Is Marshal.

The fiftieth annual Marshall Hall "Tournament" was held yesterday before a crowd of approximately 1,000 persons. Nineteen riders took part in the sport, which is patterned after the jousting of medieval knights.

A steady eye, a strong arm and a sturdy mount were needed to unseat an opponent in the "lists" of old, and they are also needed to pick off three one-inch rings suspended in the air while riding full tilt down the 100-yard course.

Three McConkeys were entered, a son taking first place, while his father came in next to last. After picking off the one-inch rings three times, the survivors battled it out on half-inch rings.

Ball Follows Joust.

The jousting was followed by a ball. The queen was chosen by the winner and her maids of honor by the runners-up.

The winner of one of the first tournaments, 47 years ago, Frank S. Barnes, was grand marshal. He recalled the day when the riders were true warriors and when the queen led a quadrille in which the first eight riders and their ladies took part.

A. D. Langley, of Clarendon, who was in charge of the program, was the only veteran jouster to try his luck. John H. Mitchell, of La Plata, Md., gave the opening address.

Though the practice of dressing in medieval costumes was discarded about 20 years ago, each rider is still announced as a "knight."

An unexpectedly large number were entered yesterday, due to the prize money, which they said was the largest of the year. Many of them are professionals who travel around Maryland, Virginia and southern Pennsylvania taking part in similar contests.

Tourney Entrants.

The professional entrants were:

A. D. Langley, Knight of Virginia; Warren McConkey, Knight of St. Paul; J. F. Love, Knight of Prince George; H. J. Hennessey, Knight of Glen Echo; J. McConkey, Knight of Dixie Boy; Gibbons, Knight of Fort Foote; H. McConkey, Knight of Potomac Market; Melvin Cole, Knight of Good Hope; J. H. Burtner, Knight of Elm Hill, and B. Kirby, Knight of Oxon Hill.

The amateur entrants were:

J. Hennessey, Knight of Blue Eagle; Bob Hennessey, Knight of Old Glory; Hal Clagett, Knight of Weston; J. J. Weems, Knight of Willow Glen; Howard Burtner, Knight of Keedys Ville; W. Watson, Knight of Hughsville; R. Blandford, Knight of Townshend; Melvin Thorn, Knight of Broad Creek; E. Willett, Knight of Sharpesville, and E. Gates, Knight of Selecia.

Taxi Driver Fined $155 on 3 Charges

Fines totaling $155 were imposed yesterday on C. L. Southard, Washington taxicab driver, by Judge Waldo Burnside in Prince Georges County Police Court in Hyattsville. Southard was arrested on a charge of driving while drunk. Peake told the court he was assaulted by Southard when he attempted to make the arrest and was forced to use his blackjack.

Judge Burnside fined Southard $100 for driving while drunk, $50 for assault and battery and $5 on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Taylor's Death Called Suicide

4 Notes Reveal Purpose of Alexandria Man to End His Life.

Coroner Llewellyn Powell, of Alexandria, late yesterday issued a suicide verdict in the death of C. E. S. Taylor, 55, whose body was found in his home, 118 North Fairfax street, earlier in the day.

A glass containing a solution of a deadly poison was found beside the bed on which the body was found, and three notes were lying on a table nearby. The notes were addressed to his wife, to a daughter, Virginia, 9, and to a sister-in-law. There was a fourth communication requesting that Charles H. Callahan, grand master of the Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons, provide a Masonic burial.

Taylor was not a member of the lodge, but he did have a card showing that he was a member of a Scottish lodge. According to the coroner, Taylor had repeatedly threatened to end his life.

The body was found by George Augustus Quayle, who went to the residence to call on Taylor. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

How To Inculcate Confidence.

Renewed fears of inflation, following a temporary restoration of confidence in the stability of the dollar, have had a very direct bearing upon recent international gold movements. Last week's announcement concerning the issuance of silver certificates was taken as indication of a drift toward further currency depreciation. Prior to that time the normal trend of exchange was favorable to the dollar, and as a result gold had been flowing into this country fairly continuously over a considerable period of time. Immediately following the silver pronouncement, however, the dollar declined sharply and soon passed the point at which it became profitable to export gold.

Foreigners especially have been decidedly skeptical as to the willingness of the Treasury to license gold exports under such conditions. They doubted whether the Government would be as ready to part with gold as to receive it, since such readiness would demonstrate intention to maintain the new exchange value of the dollar under the present modified gold standard. The prompt release by the Treasury of a relatively small gold shipment—the first transaction of the kind since declaration of the embargo in April, 1933—has sufficed to set such doubts at rest. As a result the flight from the dollar has been checked and exchange quotations have risen to a point at which gold exports are no longer considered profitable.

Other disturbing developments, induced by fears of inflation, accompanied the silver announcement. The market for Government bonds weakened to such an extent that quotations declined notably, in spite of very heavy purchases by the Treasury. But improvement followed immediately upon the prompt licensing of gold exports. For this indicated that the Treasury is prepared to make the gold standard effective by surrendering gold as well as receiving it.

In view of these recent developments does the President need to ask how to restore confidence? The foreign exchange market and the Government bond markets have just given an object lesson as to one way in which it can be done. The clear moral of these incidents is the desirability of a plain and outright statement that the Administration contemplates no more currency tinkering.

British Processing Taxes.

Few Americans realize that the British government is committed to a policy of agricultural protection quite as radical in its essential characteristics as our own AAA program.

For example, the British wheat subsidy calls for a levy upon all imported and milled flour. The proceeds of this processing tax, paid by millers, is used to pay subsidies to domestic wheat growers. The amount of wheat on which payments may be claimed is limited to the "anticipated" supply, as determined at the beginning of each season by the wheat commission. The subsidy, of course, is supposed to be shifted to consumers in the form of higher bread prices. The similarity between this plan and our benefit payments, financed out of processing taxes, is obvious. The difference in methods and in aim is due to the fact that Great Britain is dependent upon imported wheat supplies and is employing the processing tax to encourage an expansion of the area of wheat cultivation.

In addition to tariffs, import quotas and processing taxes, various direct agricultural subsidies have been allowed, notably payments to sugar-beet growers. Then there are several official marketing agencies such as the hops marketing board, which has a monopoly of the sale of hops and restricts imports to 15 per cent of brewing requirements. Marketing schemes are also in operation for pigs, bacon and milk and extensions to other commodities are under consideration.

An account of these recent developments published by the London Economist in a series of articles on "Our Agricultural Policy" offers a startling revelation of the extent to which Great Britain has departed from free trade principles during the past few years. The change is especially arresting in view of the increases in domestic living costs which result from restrictive agricultural policies. The rise in manufacturing costs implied places additional handicaps upon exporting industries essential to the maintenance of prosperity within the country.

These changes in policy are due primarily to the present world-wide striving toward national self-sufficiency—a tendency which is traceable to numerous causes, political and economic. The fact that a country which was for so many years a defender and exemplar of free trade principles has yielded to the protectionist demands of the times is evidence of the deep-seated character of the disturbances that have produced such a complete reversal of traditional policy.

The Railroad Problem.

The degree of unanimity with which the railroads have joined forces to contest the Constitutionality of the Pension Act carries two distinct suggestions to the general public. One of these is that if the carriers had in the past shown anything like the same degree of cooperation in hastening consolidations, coordinating terminal facilities and otherwise concentrating on efficient public service, their present economic status would be far more satisfactory. It is not forgotten that the report of the National Transportation Committee just 18 months ago emphasized that "the railroads should do much that they have not done to improve their condition without any Government help at all."

The other, and more immediate, suggestion conveyed by any careful study of the carriers' brief is that much more is at stake in the plea of the railroad executives than their own self-interest or the social merits of the new retirement act. The underlying issues override the claims of either capital or labor. To quote the report of the Transportation Committee again: "We are addressing a matter of National concern of the first magnitude. The railroad system must be continued and its efficiency preserved because of National necessity—economic, social and defensive."

The railroads, in short, are much more than a barometer of National prosperity. They are a factor of the first magnitude in determining whether or not there shall be prosperity. From 1920 through 1929, to cite only one illustration, the carriers averaged an expenditure of two billion dollars annually on maintenance alone. The shrinkage of this outlay to under a billion dollars in 1933, together with the more pronounced curtailment in orders for new equipment, does much to explain the present stagnation in the basic industries of the country.

Another field in which the disappearance of railroad profits has had pronounced, though not immediately obvious, social effects is in the consequent curtailment of their tax payments. These payments fell from $405,000,000 in 1929 to $235,000,000 in 1933. Schools, libraries, playgrounds and many other fundamental enterprises of local government have been cut down as a direct result of the plight of the railroads. It is too easily assumed that penalization of the carriers affects only the salaries of railroad presidents or "bloated bondholders." Actually the railroads are so entwined with the structure of our National life that the imposition of burdens on the transportation system is often felt most heavily by persons who do not realize what is causing the pinch.

In these circumstances the need for a comprehensive and careful Governmental policy toward the carriers is imperative. And such a policy, as the Brookings Institution has pointed out in its admirable study of "The American Transportation Problem," must be a unified transportation policy rather than just a railroad policy.

At the present time the Government is adding to the railroad problem by the direct competition of the Inland Waterways Corporation and the indirect competition of new highways, quickly seized upon for development of truck and bus transportation. The St. Lawrence project, if the Administration had had its way, would have intensified this competition. Yet several Federal agencies, notably the RFC, have advanced huge sums to support a railroad structure which other Governmental agencies tend to undermine. The NRA provisions, for instance, are estimated to have increased the railroads' outlay for materials by some $137,000,000, of course without any assurance of revenue to cover these costs.

If the problem is viewed as a whole the unity shown by the carriers in opposition to what may seem fairly slight additional burdens is readily comprehensible. They feel in the position of the camel when the last straw was loaded upon his back. It is perfectly true that this camel has in certain instances behaved as an arrogant, overbearing, self-seeking and short-sighted animal. But it does not follow from this that anything is to be gained for anybody by crushing him now.

To see that such disastrous outcome is averted has been made the highly complicated task of the Federal Coordinator of Transportation. Pending his final recommendations, and legislative action thereon, the aim of the Government should be to ease rather than intensify the present strain upon the central part of our unsystematized transportation network. Denial of the request for an injunction against the retirement act does nothing to solve the railroad problem.

A Clear Field For Ritchie.

Withdrawal of Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore from the Democratic race for Governor in Maryland not only leaves Gov. Albert C. Ritchie practically a clear field for renomination, but also points strongly to his reelection for a fifth term in November.

Much has been said in recent months of the Ritchie political machine, carefully built up over a period of years. And none has been more cognizant of the power of that organization than Mayor Jackson. He staked his chances for the party nomination on a revolt of the rank and file of Democratic voters against the so-called bosses. But as Mr. Jackson journeyed about the State seeking support he discovered that Gov. Ritchie does not need to depend so greatly on his machine. The Mayor failed to find the dissatisfaction with Gov. Ritchie that he expected. On the contrary he found Mr. Ritchie still very popular with voters of independent mind. So the mayor has abandoned the effort, presumably convinced that he would otherwise be overwhelmingly defeated at next month's primary.

If the body of Maryland Democrats are satisfied with Gov. Ritchie there is reasonable assurance that he will be reelected, since that party dominates Maryland. This is true when the Republicans are at their best. Only on two occasions since the Civil War, when the Democrats were sharply split into two factions, have the Republicans been successful in electing one of their number Governor. This year Republican chances are further dimmed by their own bitter, three-cornered fight for the gubernatorial nomination.

The Wrong Approach.

The Federal Housing Administration's "home renovation drive" has been launched as a crusading recovery measure with a pomp and circumstance mildly reminiscent of the atmosphere in which the Blue Eagle was hatched. It is most unfortunate that a plan of this sort, intended to provide loans to reliable borrowers through established agencies, should be ballyhooed in advance far beyond the probable measure of its effectiveness.

In the first place, it is doubtful whether large numbers of homeowners are waiting for an opportunity to borrow for renovizing purposes. As in the case of the much advertised proposal to make direct loans to industry, which has so far resulted in a few pitifully small advances, it is more than likely that existing financing agencies are quite willing and able to satisfy most of the borrowing needs of homeowners who are good credit risks. Unless lenders are encouraged by the limited Government guarantee against loss to make unwise advances, it seems very dubious that the advertised goal of a billion in housing loans will be even remotely approached.

In this case as in earlier attempts to bring about recovery by raising wages and urging the public to buy more goods for immediate consumption, the Administration is proceeding upon the theory that recovery must start with an expansion of consumer buying. It is already apparent that raising of wages and creation of work have not provided a foundation for an all-round recovery embracing the heavy industries. Hence, it is proposed to stimulate construction activities by inducing homeowners to borrow money and spend it for general repairs. Like the abortive efforts to revive business by adoption of policies that have increased production costs, this latest experiment is all too likely to produce disappointing results.

We are not likely to succeed in spending and borrowing our way out of a depression which was brought on by overspending and overborrowing. What is needed to restore a sound basis for loan expansion for housing and for all other purposes is restoration of investment confidence. In other words, the sure way to secure revival of industries at present dormant is to encourage the spending of surplus income by people who have money to invest in capital equipment. Then there would be no need to "sell" loans to homeowners who have no surplus funds at their disposal and who often ought to be dissuaded from adding to their existing liabilities instead of being urged to contract new debts.

It is a waste of time and energy to try to bring about recovery by appeals to consumers to spend, borrow and spend again. Consumer buying would follow naturally upon the investment expansion needed to provide employment for the millions who are dependent upon the heavy industries. An investment revival, however, requires that industry be relieved from the overhanging threat of currency manipulation, and be guaranteed protection against unnecessary governmental competition.

La Grande Chartreuse.

After an exile of 30 years, petition has been made to the President of France to permit return of the Carthusian monks to that spot in the Isere Alps where they founded their colony almost nine centuries ago. It is significant that the petition should be presented by a Socialist deputy, representative of a party which acclaimed the decree for the explusion of the religious orders resulting in the last evacuation of La Grande Chartreuse.

Its chateau and park of St. Pierre have a warm place in a legion of hearts—religious, beauty-loving and epicurean. To the devout the scene recalls St. Bruno of Cologne, the founder of the order, and such early brothers as the one who became England's famous St. Hugh, Bishop of Lincoln. And no mere tourist who has climbed to the lofty domain will ever forget the glory of its views, or the chateau's high roofs of black slate, its leaping clock-tower, its cross-topped turrets.

Finally, there must be few tolerable trenchermen who have not applauded the seventeenth century Mareschal d'Estrees for concocting, or Apothecary-Brother Gerome Maubec for perfecting, those twin liqueurs, green and yellow, the true secret of whose distillation the good monks carried into exile with them in 1904.

The Carthusian Order flourishes, but it has never ceased to long for a restoration of the mother house. Neglect has dimmed the loveliness of the chateau. And the great liqueur—all profits went to works of religion and charity—can not be traditionally concocted anywhere else or by anybody except the Carthusians. Banishment is no new experience in their history. The French Revolution drove them forth, but they came back in 1816. Thousands of laymen will now hope that the present exile is also shortly to be terminated.

License to marry was refused a California woman, 81, by a judge who ruled that she is too old to marry. Such disloyalty to the California climate shouldn't be tolerated.

Once upon a time a woman was ready five minutes ahead of time to leave for the theater, and she didn't enjoy the show one bit.

It's easy to tell whether a person's argument is based on facts or prejudice. If it's based on prejudice he gets mad enough to fight.

Nearly everyone seems to be in favor of recovery except the bathing girls.

It takes very little to suit the modern bathing girl.

Letters to the Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

The Value of This Forum.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As I read the contents of a daily newspaper I sometimes try to determine what a large role it plays in the lives of most of us. Unquestionably, it is the largest single factor that shapes our opinions. It has been truly said that the American press forms public opinion instead of public opinion forming the press.

Today, more than ever, the press is assuming the role of a protagonist in the drama of our daily National affairs. The press is an "internuncio" between the people and the Government. It is the mouthpiece of our Government. President Roosevelt and his New Deal have been given more publicity than any other President, and his success may be attributed to this one factor.

On the other hand, it is doubtful whether the press has expressed true public opinion in its interpretations of public sentiment. Its translation of public sentiment is too often colored by certain inclinations, political and otherwise. The same is true of its interpretations when the press is acting as a mouthpiece for the Government. In this sense, we may say that we have no freedom of the press. We have no Constitutional limitations on the freedom of the press, but overt artificial restrictions which have achieved the same end have grown up.

Fortunately, however, many newspapers have attempted to give public opinion expression through a different, but nevertheless important, channel. Reference is made to the columns under the heading of "Letters to the Editor." These columns, to my mind, express more true public opinion than any part of a newspaper. Although they are not free from limitations, due to the commercial aspect of a newspaper, they do express true sentiments of the people themselves. Further, these columns afford a friendly method of communication of ideas. They are no doubt read by many statesmen, because these columns express the views of their constituents.

Progress has been made by the American press through force of events and by reason of the existence of a "public opinion" which it is unquestionably shaping at every hour and minute. This public opinion is discovering that through its force it is finding a method of self-expression. It is a logical consequence. Open-minded editors and publishers have already realized the value of giving public opinion expression, especially by columns of "Letters to the Editor."

"Something Amiss."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Throughout this part of the country tax sales are being held, and aged couples, widows with small children, and others are being turned out and having their homes sold. Many of these are farm homes where the owners could maintain themselves, but could not, under present conditions, pay taxes. In many cases it is pitiful in the extreme and the average amount of overdue taxes is less than $100. At the same time we read in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post that society, through our present Administration, is spending as much as $7,500 each in subsistence homes at Reedsville, W. Va., these to be turned over to deserving citizens and paid for at some future time.

Is there not something amiss with a society which turns one good citizen out of his home, in which he has a considerable investment, for a paltry sum of less than $100 in overdue taxes while another citizen is provided with a home at a cost of $7,500 in which he has not one nickel invested?

Sold Into Slavery?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have a great admiration for President Roosevelt's honesty and patriotism, but he is not infallible. In raising the vast amount of money to give employment, food and clothing to the destitute, he has accomplished a noble achievement which has endeared him to all good citizens, but in doing this he has practically sold this and the next generation into slavery to the money aristocracy.

His demonetizing of gold was a noble achievement. The gold standard had been used by the great bankers like loaded dice to inflate or deflate the National currency.

Now the currency has been greatly inflated by the sale of bonds, on which the Government pays interest from the taxes of the people. The inflation occurs when the Government permits the holders of these bonds to deposit them with the Secretary of the Treasury as collateral, for the face value of them, and the Government, in turn, issues new currency at a nominal rate of interest. If this is not inflation, what is it?

The President is preaching unselfishness. If he insists that the country practice this virtue, inflation should have been made by the issuance of currency to pay the bonus to the veterans and the interest on bonds and to balance the budget.

Why should we pay interest on bonds to inflate the currency, when it can be done by the issuance of currency by the Government? The payment of the bonus would put money in circulation in every community in the country and almost every family in the Nation.

Silver should be remonetized with gold, because it would put new life into the mining industry, and give employment to hundreds. It would increase our trade with more than half the population of the world that uses silver only for money. The Government has paid a staggering price to stimulate production of cotton and cereals in other nations to compete with American farmers and to abrogate the law of supply and demand.

The Constitution as a Serial.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It would be a stroke of journalism to focus public attention on the Constitution because the average man would read it section by section. It would be a service to the American people for the reason that they would read this document in serial form.

Newspapers are the only agency through which the details of the Constitution can reach the American people.

At this time nothing could be more important than to acquaint the masses of people with the full provisions of our Constitution. In my judgment, a serial of this character would be of unlimited influence toward the stabilization of this Nation. My observations have convinced me that nine-tenths of our people never have read any part of the Constitution. Based upon my experience with the masses, publication of the Constitution serially would have an intense reader-interest and such interest would justify its publication as a service to a troubled people.

Our Traffic Problems.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In "A Losing Game" in your issue of August 4 by B. W. the pedestrian is defended. Often he is to blame. I think that all who cross on a red light should be arrested and fined. My recollection is that in 1928 they were so treated in Los Angeles. Certainly at that time I saw no such reckless disregard of traffic signals such as I witness here constantly. The contemptuous manner in which it is done calls for sharp rebuke.

But, when all this is said, it still remains true that the most scrupulously careful are only saved from injury or death by agility, alertness, and luck or Providence. Blocks 4900 and 5000 Connecticut avenue are without protection of any kind. Pedestrians here are in constant peril, by reason of the heavy traffic, often until late at night. We have an additional terror here, in that many motorists travel without lights. My wife, who has excellent vision, counted ten such cars after 8 o'clock at night. How can any pedestrian guard against such a peril? I never get across this wild highway safely without uttering a prayer of thanksgiving. If I were not religious it would be an imprecation against authorities who permit such inhuman conditions!

My wife wishes to corroborate B. W. She has stood at Thirteenth and F again and again and noted the indifference of motorists to the law-respecting right and left turns. To all kind-hearted motorists a word will be sufficient. But I fear that some of them will require something more severe.

A. H. THOMPSON.
Washington, Aug. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I would like to answer B. W.'s letter of August 4.

Come, come, now, B. W., let us be fair. Do you suppose those people who make the right-hand turns at Thirteenth and F streets are wittingly and deliberately defying the regulation?

The fact of the matter is that the regulation is impracticable because it is unenforceable. It is unenforceable because it is contrary to an almost universally understood rule.

The only way people driving cars can learn about these exceptions to the universally understood rules is by reading them as they approach the intersections. This is grossly unfair. A man driving a car through the busy streets can not reasonably be expected to read any but the simplest and most quickly recognized signs, such as "stop" and "slow." And he certainly can not be expected to read and digest, in time to act on them, all kinds of signs which conflict with regulations in general acceptance.

The traffic people here are doing an excellent job in handling a situation that to the dweller in any other city in the world would seem fantastic and unbelievable. Washington has one motor car for every three and a fraction people—more than one car to a family.

The city has about twice as many, or, anyhow, one-third more, motor cars than it has any possible business having. As everyone knows, this condition has resulted from unrestricted night parking on the streets and failure to institute compulsory responsibility on owners.

The Post Impressionist

Italy At Jutland.

Postoffice, Thursday.

THE question of who won the Battle of Jutland is beginning to rival in popularity that old query about responsibility for the assassination of Cock Robin.

Various learned Germans have published various learned works acclaiming Jutland as a great German naval victory, a laurel wreath for their High Sea Fleet and the coronation of the whole Von Tirpitz system. Just as many English experts have just as ably contended that the action was entirely indecisive. Now enters another's personage—and an Italian at that—who argues that it was a complete British triumph.

We have the pleasure of introducing to you Epicarmio Corbino and his treatise, La Battaglia dello Jutland, published by the house of A. Giuffre, Milan.

Dr. Corbino makes no pretense at being a "naval authority"—whatever that is. He calls his book Vista da un Economista. But he seems to us to evince somewhat more common sense than a dozen "naval authorities," and he certainly produces a plausible case.

What, after all, he asks, makes a naval battle decisive? Not necessarily annihilation, he answers. "A victorious naval battle must modify a strategical situation, affording the victor possibilities of action that he did not previously possess, or (else) depriving the beaten of so much of his confidence in his armament that he is thereby dissuaded from further attempts to make use of it."

In other words, Dr. Corbino doesn't regard the Battle of Jutland as an isolated fact. He regards it in the light of all the years that Von Tirpitz spent for organizing the force which Germany put into it—in the light, also, of what that force did not do, of what Jutland made it incapable of doing, thereafter.

The High Sea Fleet was designed to range the high seas in the event of war. War came. The High Sea Fleet met the British fleet at Jutland. As a result of this meeting the German High Naval Command resolved to abandon in future, and did practically abandon, active use of the High Sea Fleet. To our unenlightened eye, that looks uncommonly like the modification of a strategical situation. It more than resembles a deprivation of so much of the Von Tirpitz confidence in his armament that he was "dissuaded from further attempts to make use of it."

Before Jutland the policy of the naval war was one of attrition, and its object a certain equalization in the relative strengths of the opposing fleets. Once Jutland was fought, the British felt free to consider the employment of battleships as convoys; the Germans turned to the submarine and, in general, forsook direct action for the tactics of diversion.

Dr. Corbino justifies his conclusions by a careful study of the German Navy from the start of the great naval construction marathon in 1897. He analyzes the parts played in the making of the High Sea Fleet and its policy by technical skill, organization, national characteristics, even personality. He analyzes the same forces as they appeared on the British side of that long make-ready. He finds in the British Fisher "a scintillating intellect, a lively and aggressive nature, a restless brain, always in search of something new"—and roundly condemns as egregious error that "something new" when it took form in the dreadnaught. Similarly, Dr. Corbino sees Von Tirpitz methodical and calm, with tremendous powers of organization.

Exactly how was it, then, that the beam finally swung between the creations of these two men as it did swing in the test of Jutland?

"Owing to the greater thoroughness with which German thought treated the problems which had to be solved in the construction of a fleet"—so the London Times critic of Dr. Corbino answers this inquiry—"the ships of which it consisted were superior to those of England, and the instruments with which they were furnished were more efficiently used. The final German failure . . . (was) a persistent error in the command.

"Provided with a magnificent instrument, the High Command distrusted it, largely from want of knowledge of how really good it was. It let slip the opportunity when the difference in numerical strength was so small that technical and tactical superiority was enough to tip the balance in its favor. It wanted boldness."

In other words, Jutland was both the cause and the effect: Jutland and Jellicoe.

For if Dr. Corbino does not pose as a naval authority, he certainly shows himself a good cross-examiner of naval authorities. He subpenas them, puts them on the stand, compares their opinions. And out of these he produces the British Commander-in-Chief as that factor upon which Von Tirpitz hadn't counted—just because Jellicoe quite clearly counted on his own opponent: "No man displayed," as our critic paraphrases it, "a more accurate appreciation of the strength of his enemy, or of the needs of the strategical situation."

It's all rather rough on the mechanistic theorists. Throughout the naval warfare, the British had inferior material in shells, fuses, mines. They failed to defend Scapa Flow, to back up Cradock. Even at Jutland itself there was that division of the two squadrons of their cruiser force. But they did have Jellicoe.

Thus, anyhow, our Italian's Vista da un Economista.

We should like to know what Mahan would have said about it.

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

The Life of the Party.

AT SEA—Dear Aleck: You will be surprised to know that I have finally come to be the life of the party. It was an uphill struggle, though. Aleck, and I don't believe I would have made it had it not been for my clean living and particularly my clean fun. My competition was Robert Jachens, the Baltimore opera star. He can and does sing bass. Well, for one thing, singing comes difficult to me and then it is anything but bass. It is very tenorish.

BARGERON

But where I got Jachens, Aleck, was through my persistence. He would sing every night in the lounge, but I would wait until everybody had retired to his stateroom and then I would go up and down the corridors singing at the top of my voice. What I really think established me, though, Aleck, was that I would stick my head through the portholes of the cabins on the upper deck and sing lustily. Some sights I would see but everybody realized it was just clean fun on my part.

I knew I had arrived when they had a mock trial last night and I was selected as the prisoner. This was really the official recognition that I was the life of the party. Jachens felt mighty bad about it, but after all he had to admit that the race had been fair and above board.

It was the funniest thing, Aleck. The captain announced at dinner that something serious had developed on board and that he would have to take drastic action and that would everybody please remain in his seat after dinner. When the time came he announced that I was the culprit and would the sheriff please put me under arrest. The sheriff was really the first officer, Aleck. Well, sir, he came forward and handcuffed me. And everybody laughed and roared. The Southern lawyer aboard acted as the prosecuting attorney and was he in his element, Aleck. He acted just like a lawyer and the old ladies observed to one another that he appeared to be very smart. A civil engineer acted as judge and frequently banged his gavel and ordered that the court suspend while the judge took a drink. Then he would tip a gin bottle to his mouth. It wasn't really gin. It was water but everybody would laugh until their sides ached.

I was charged with being up in the crow's nest, Aleck, which, of course, was not really true because I don't know what a crow is. And I would never go into the nest of anything that I didn't know what it was.

It looked for awhile that the Southern lawyer might steal the show from me because he was making such an impression with his big words and his judicial terms. Then I did something that changed the whole tenor of the trial and put me in an entirely different light, or at least caused the passengers to admit that I have two sides.

When it came my time to plead in my own defense I just got up, Aleck, and walked with firm step toward the bar.

"Ceasar," I said, addressing the court, "I who am about to die salute you."

Aleck, the effect was electrifying. Everybody saw then that I could quote from history, that beneath my levity was erudition.

It sort of sobered everybody up, Aleck, particularly the school teachers. I shall always believe it was the turning point in Miss Strowbar's shipboard life. She is the blonde beauty I told you about, Aleck. Well, she tried to keep it quiet but it got out that she was a school teacher.

She had been, being pretty frivolous, Aleck, figuring, I suppose, that after all, our children weren't being intrusted to her care now.

But when I said what I did it sent her mind back to the classroom, Aleck, back to the serious purposes of life. She has been a changed woman ever since. She just told me that she realized now there was more to life than just play.

However, it hasn't affected the young and beautiful wife of the elderly fish merchant, Aleck. She says she never heard of "that Mr. Ceasar," and that furthermore she isn't concerned in erudite men. I think she likes the Johnny Weissmuller type. I'm going in swimming tomorrow, Aleck. Yours for versatility.

Guardsmen Face Desertion Penalty

Court-Martial Recommends Dishonorable Discharge.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Dishonorable discharges for deserting Battery F of the 111th Field Artillery of the Virginia National Guard were recommended at court-martial proceedings here yesterday against Privates J. Lee Cooke, jr., and Harry H. Berry.

Berry and Cooke are alleged to have returned to Fredericksbug several days after the battery reached its summer encampment at Indiantown, Pa. Berry received a 10-day jail sentence in addition to his discharge.

Execution of the punishments will be delayed pending approval by regimental headquarters.

Moffett Voices Plea For Housing Program

Federal Administrator, in Radio Talk, Defends Current Price Levels in Building Phase of Renovizing Drive.

Federal Housing Administrator James A. Moffett last night defended current price levels in the building industries in urging support of the home modernization campaign in an address broadcast over a National Broadcasting Co. network.

"Surely, if industry generally is operating with little, if any, profit, it is not in a position to make a radical reduction in prices," he said.

"I see no reason why repairs, improvements and modernization, and the building of new houses should be done without a fair profit to industry. Our position is simply that fair prices must be fair to both the producer and the consumer."

The FHA will be on the alert, however, "to expose any cases where profiteering might arise," he added, but, on the other hand, it will not lend itself "to any drive to force industries to chisel on their wages or go bankrupt."

First Outright Comment.

The address was Mr. Moffett's first outright comment on the price phase of the renovizing drive. Before the campaign opened he gave notice he was studying the building and construction industries' price levels.

Last night he asserted a general advance in price levels may be expected if the FHA campaign goes over, adding:

"We have been falling behind in our home modernization program ever since 1930, and a potential market of many billions of dollars lies ahead in that field. Through this program ample credit will be provided and it will be made available to those who are entitled to it."

The campaign, Mr. Moffett predicted, will not only decrease unemployment in the building trades, but it will stimulate many allied industries, such as mining, railway and truck transportation and the marketing of household furnishings.

The Administration outlined the procedure by which a property owner may obtain a loan from one of the 28,000 approved financial institutions, and briefly described the workings of the mortgage insurance phase of the campaign, which has not yet started.

Plan Is Explained.

He said under this plan banks may obtain insurance of long-term amortized home mortgages from the FHA. Then, if the home owner defaults, the bank may turn over its claims against the property in return for a debenture for the full amount of principal due on the mortgage. The debenture will run three years longer than the mortgage and carry an interest rate of 3 per cent.

On each insured mortgage the home owner will be required to add to his monthly payment for interest and amortization a small premium, amounting yearly to not less than one-half of 1 per cent, nor more than 1 per cent of the face amount of his mortgage.

"By thus purchasing an insurance protection of this type for his lender," Mr. Moffett said, "the borrower is able to secure terms and rates, the value of which, to him, far exceeds the cost of the insurance."

Speaking of the home modernization campaign, Mr. Moffett said it is no experiment. Great Britain, he said, affords an example of what can be done in this field.

"Ever since 1922 that country has constructed approximately 2,500,000 homes, and this year will construct between 300,000 and 400,000 homes," he said. "Contrast this experience with a drop of 90 per cent in our own home-building activity."

Railroads Lose Court Battle On Pension Act

District Judge Refuses to Halt Enforcement of Legislation.

ment of the act which will come up for a hearing in the fall.

In the meantime, Justice Proctor said, the carriers are at liberty to again appeal for an injunction should they feel the necessity arises. He indicated he believes an early decision by the United States Supreme Court as to the act's Constitutionality is necessary.

Government attorneys informed Justice Proctor they believed it necessiary to begin operation of the act at once, so the annuities due February 1 could be available. Otherwise, there "would be no way of measuring in dollars and cents the loss that would be thrown upon the prospective retiring employes."

Sidney R. Prince, chief spokesman for the railways, sought assurances from Chaffitz that the two orders now being prepared are the only ones contemplated while the act remains untested by the Supreme Court. He was told the board might draft other orders at any time. This, Mr. Prince said, makes it possible for the roads to be subjected to unlimited financial demands "against which they should have protection."

Justice Proctor said he "felt certain" Congress would reimburse the roads for any expenditures they made if the law eventually is held un-Constitutional.

The board was set up to administer provisions of the act, which creates a uniform retirement system. The railways sought to restrain its enforcement because it will cost them, they estimate, $60,000,000 the first year and more each year for a four-year period.

The act, at the end of four years, calls upon the board members to report on its feasibility.

Gov. Peery Ends Oyster Battle

Reappoints Armstrong to Head State Fisheries.

Richmond, Aug. 15 (AP).—Richard Armstrong, of Hampton, was reappointed State commissioner of fisheries by Gov. George C. Peery today.

The commission remains the same with the exception of the place held by J. Davis Reed, of Portsmouth. He is replaced by George Dehardi, Commonwealth's attorney of Gloucester County, in order, the Governor said, "that the oyster tonging area be represented on the commission." State Senator George W. Layman, of Craig, and Delegate Wilbur C. Hall, of Loudoun, appointed from inland sections of the State by Gov. John Garland Pollard, were reappointed. Dr. W. F. Kellam, of Accomac, remains on the commission and W. W. Rowell, chief clerk and auditor, retains his post.

The appointments, announced by the Governor late today, ends a controversy which has swirled about the commission chairmanship for almost a year. Oyster tongers, through their representatives in the General Assembly, have vigorously opposed breaking the Baylor survey, which defines the natural rock, or public tonging, areas.

WRBX Director Named.

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—John H. Moses, of New York, formerly connected with Radio Station WAAT at Jersey City, N. J., today became director of WRBX. He succeeds Jerry Akers, who was managing director of the station for a year and a half.

Three to Hold Election Posts "At Own Risk"

Montgomery Board Cites Rule Barring Employes of Government.

The board of election supervisors of Montgomery County, Md., yesterday served notice on three election officials, who were found to be employes of the Federal Government, that they would serve in their election capacity "at their own risk."

The board cited a ruling of the United States Civil Service Commission that prohibits participation of Federal employes in any political activity. All three were named on the list of Republican election officials presented Tuesday to the board for approval by Walter W. Dawson, of Rockville, chairman of the Republican State central committee for the county.

Approval of the list was granted by the board with the exception of one William H. Burdette, of Damascus district. It was revealed that a candidate for judge of the orphans court on the fusion ticket bears this name and approval was held in abeyance until it could be determined if the nominee also was the person named on the election list. Maryland laws prohibit a candidate from serving as an election official.

Chairman Dawson yesterday completed the list of election and registration officials by announcing the following appointments:

Rockville District, Fourth Precinct, Alton L. Wells, registrar; Col. J. E. F. Defandorf and Mabel V. Wells, clerks; William Carter, doorkeeper.

463 Families Obtain Relief

Montgomery County Report for July Is Made.

Case workers employed by the Montgomery County (Md.) Welfare Board contacted 734 local families in July in their work of solving problems of unemployment or underemployment, it was announced yesterday by Miss Dorothy A. Everson, executive secretary.

The board provided relief either in the form of work relief, EWA projects or in direct relief orders to 463 families. Employment in the work relief division was given 330 men and women.

Only 58 new families applied for help or reapplied after a period of dispensing with assistance from the board. The number given assistance has decreased by 44 families since June. Miss Everson attributed this decrease to opportunities for employment provided by local farmers and other sources. Fifteen boys were sent to Civilian Conservation Corps camps and another allotment will be made in September, she said.

Richmond Banks Ready To Help Home Owners

Richmond, Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Three Richmond banks today were ready to make loans for the modernization of home and other property under the provisions of the Federal housing act.

The First & Merchants National Bank and the Southern Bank & Trust Co. today fell in line, after the Morris Plan Bank of Virginia yesterday started the ball rolling by being the first local institution to make such loans.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Sundry Postmortems.

"IT IS difference of opinion which makes horse races," Mark Twain once said. And also, I'm sure, it makes book-reviewing. For I wouldn't have you think that the members of our tribe of book-tasters keep in direct telegraphic communication with each other, and agree never to come out with a judgment until we can all say the same thing.

THEO. HALL

At the same time, it is only polite to tell you once in a while wherein some of the tribe differ from your very favorite reviewer. There's no need to say much about the English journalist—book critics—better men than I have failed utterly to understand them. All I can note here is the fact that they seem to read with colored spectacles of a hue which would make rose look like mud-brown.

Closer home, take the matter of H. E. Bates' "The Woman Who Had Imagination: and Other Stories" (MacMillan). On that book the New York critics have been exhausting whole vocabularies of praise—charming, delicate, sensitive, beautifully written, and so on. And I couldn't stomach the book, and said that its writing was "flat and undistinguished."

Nothing will induce me to see otherwise. The writing struck me as peculiarly and discomfitingly amateurish, and for the simple reason that Mr. Bates pulled out all the stops on the organ as far they would go. His villains were so utterly and impossibly villainous, his young poetic heroes so abysmally tender and deserving. He would turn on the beauty and his style would flower as if in a hot-house. When he was pathetic he fairly dripped. No; it is no great merit to evince all the distinction, restraint, and finesse of the ordinary Sunday supplement.

* * * *

Paul Engle's book of verse, "American Song" (Doubleday Doran), was issued with considerable fanfare and in some quarters met with more. J. Donald Adams, editor of the New York Times Sunday book review, devoted a recent front page of that section to sincere hosannas for the book. "Distinguished quality" and "a literary landmark," he said.

Regretfully, I could not agree. The style of the verses seemed verbose and blunted, the sentiments rather commonplace.

But I was not alone in thinking this—Ruth Lechlitner, in the New York Herald Tribune book section, spoke of "old, familiar cant" and "poor versification." She ended her able review: "And he is without doubt slated to win the next Pulitzer award." I'm afraid so.

And so it goes, tit for tat. Until the regimented state arrives, it seems a blessing that book reviewers will disagree.

* * * *

And then there's the matter of how Mr. Oliver Onions, 51-year-old English novelist, pronounces his name. Like the Guelphs and the Ghibellines, opinion divides into two camps. One side says "Unyunz," the other "o-NIGH-ons."

In the answers to my questionnaire the other day I put it as the first, the plain vegetable way. "Webster's International Dictionary" thus gives it. And there was support in the "International Book of Names" (published last fall by Crowell) by C. O. Sylvester Mawson, a well-known lexicographer who has edited "Roget's Thesaurus."

Mr. Wawson did the obvious but smart thing of writing to Mr. Onions himself. In a letter dated July 3, 1933, this was the reply: "Neither I nor any member of my family has ever pronounced the name Onions otherwise than in the common-or-garden way. I have never seen 'o-NIGH-ons' except as the fantasy of a paragraph maker." There, I thought—who should know better than Mr. Onions himself?

Now it seems that about a week ago "Strictly Speaking," that excellent little column on pronunciations on The Post's Woman's Page, came out with the "o-NIGH-ons" version. Was it fantasy? Hardly! For the author of that column had her information at rather closer hand than even Mr. Mawson.

She was telling me about it just now. In London in the spring of 1930, she went to hear a lecture by Mr. Onions. He was introduced as "o-NIGH-ons." After the lecture she went up to speak to him. Was he related to a certain Onions family she had known in Texas? He thought not, but he'd heard of them. Then he added: "And d'you know, they do the most dreadful thing! They call themselves 'UN-yunz!'"

All of which makes it pretty hard for the rest of us to know our onions.

* * * *

That reminds me to thank a number of correspondents who wrote me their opinions of that questionnaire. All remarked that it was much too stiff. As one of them put it neatly: "In questions 2 and 7 the proviso 'during the past year' removes them from the amateur class. How do I know, for example, exactly the month when 'Life Begins at Forty' first appeared?"

That's a very just point. Next time I promise to make the questions a lot more fun for all concerned.

Steps Taken for New Homestead Project

Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—William Grimes, head of the Taylor County rehabilitation committee, announces that options are being taken on tracts in Taylor County to establish another Federal subsistence homestead project similar to those at Arthurdale in Preston County, in the Tygarts Valley near Mill Creek and near Winfield in Putnam County.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Home Discussion of Nationalized Silver.

"What's the matter, Wilbur?"

"I'm worried about silver."

"We haven't any silver, dear."

"I know; but I'm still worried. It's gonna be $1.29 an ounce this winter. Tst! Tst!"

"What of it? We got along without any last winter and we can get along without it this winter."

* * * *

"But it's very serious, honey. You don't seem to understand. Now you take spot silver, for instance."

"What's spot silver?"

"Silver on the spot."

"Is silver on the spot?"

"I'll say it is."

* * * *

"Youre taking it too seriously, Wilbur. After all, I don't see how silver affects us."

"That's because you don't understand economics. Silver affects everybody. Do you want silver back of your money?"

"I never pay any attention to what's back of my money. Money is money, Wilbur."

"That's where you're mistaken. Everything depends on what's back of it. China has a silver currency. Do you want us to be like China?"

"There are good Chinamen and bad Chinamen, Wilbur. Some of our best friends are Chinese."

* * * *

"I lay awake all last night thinking about China."

"It was that bottle of beer you had before going to bed, dear."

"No. You women just don't realize the gravity of this silver move. Do you know what the National silver reserve is?"

"Don't tell me; I hate figures, Wilbur."

"Look what's happening to foreign exchange!"

"Well, if those foreigners don't like it, let 'em go back where they came from!"

* * * *

"Honey, you don't seem to get the seriousness of the situation at all."

"With me a dollar is a dollar, whether I exchange it with foreigners or Americans."

"Lemme see if I can get it straight so you'll grasp it. We've always had a gold base behind our dollars. Now we are going to have more of a silver base. Would you just as soon have a silver dollar as a gold dollar?"

"Sure. I'll even take a check!"

The Government, fighting legitimate distillers guilty of worse tricks than the bootleggers ever tried to get away with, has now acted against the fake label. One of the current dodges is to state on the label: "The youngest whisky in this bottle is one year old." Thereby conveying the idea that there is something older in the mixture.

Washington's latest orders call for a complete statement of young and old whiskies used in any blend, and the Ultimate Consumer, with a deep sigh, once more hopes for a break.

The National Gallery

CHARLES HOYT MARCH, Federal Trade Commissioner. Stumped Minnesota for President Coolidge who appointed him a member of the commission in 1929. Mentioned as Vice Presidential candidate, he has been active as a lawyer-banker, member of the U. S. Supreme Court, mayor of Litchfield, Minn., and a member of Roosevelt's Industrial Recovery Board. While chairman of commission urged that small business man be allowed opportunity to trade without monopoly and with benefits of free competition. Associated with many clubs, military, Masonic and civic, he organized Minnesota's Fourth Militia, serving with rank of colonel. Distinguished looking, heavy-set, florid, he is jovial, popular, but not easily swerved from his purpose. Shoots ducks, golf and maintains 1,000-acre estate stocked with full-blood horses and cattle.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Don't Take the Road to Rome If You're Hunting Moose

By Robert Quillen.

If three neighbors go to town, one to have a carburetor adjusted, one to buy a coat and one to complain of an error in his gas bill, they are all equally successful if each does the thing he set out to do.

It would be absurd to call one of them a failure because he obtained the coat he went for and failed to have his carburetor adjusted; yet that is the usual method of defining failures.

There is no arbitrary and universal standard of success. The standard is fixed by majority opinion of the time and place. In Russia the typical American success would be not only a failure, but criminal as well. And in some regions the greatest success is the murderer who has collected the largest number of human skulls.

These popular and local definitions of success serve to convey meaning, which is the purpose of all definitions, but they are often unfair to the indivdiual.

In measuring any man's success the only fair and accurate measuring rod is his purpose.

If you would measure your own, ask yourself the simple question: What do I desire to get out of life?

It isn't a question of what you wish for. You might wish for a million dollars, a yacht and a mansion without really desiring them at all.

Desire is a passion. The youth who desires a maid can think of nothing else. He can neither eat nor sleep. His heart is sick with yearning.

That is desire, and people who desire a thing in that way usually get it.

Fortunately, Nature is consistent in fixing our limitations. If we lack the ability to get a thing, we also lack the capacity to desire it. One doomed to obscurity in a village yearns for the local postoffice—not for the Presidency.

Discover what thing it is that you desire from life and you will find the getting of it within your capacities.

And when you have obtained it, whether it be a seat in the Senate or a rattletrap houseboat on a river that runs through the wilderness, you have made a success of life, for no man can do more than reach his goal.

Kenneth Harlan's 4th Marriage Is Annulled

Baltimore, Aug. 15 (Spl.).—The fourth marriage of Kenneth Harlan, stage and screen player, was annulled here today by Judge Rowland K. Adams on Harlan's complaint that both he and his bride were intoxicated at the time of the wedding, November 9, 1932.

Harlan's wife was Mrs. Phyllis McClure, scenario writer now living in New York. According to Harlan's attorneys, the couple met in Baltimore while Harlan was appearing at a vaudeville theater, and were married a few days later.

Arch Repainting Work Completed

Only Memorial to Writers During Civil War.

Hagerstown, Md., August 15 (Spl.).—The repainting of the War Correspondents Memorial Arch at Crampton's Gap has been completed.

The arch is the only monument to writers during the Civil War and contains the names of 150.

The arch was taken over by the Government recently. It was erected by George Alfred Townsend, who wrote under the penname of "Gath." Townsend's home is nearby and in the years following the Civil War was visited by Presidents of the United States and other notables.

Ordinance May Let Girls Thumb Ride From Sidewalks

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.). The Mayor and City Council, who received a recommendation last week from the Board of Street Commissioners for an antihitch-hiking ordinance, may enact one that is both satisfactory to the complaining motorists and also to girls.

Girls, who have dates with Waynesboro and other out-of-town youths, had indicated they would protest a drastic ordinance that would outlaw hitch hiking entirely, which would mean dateless nights.

It has been suggested that the local ordinance be patterned after that of Annapolis, which prohibits thumbing a ride except from the pavement. The moment the hitch hiker steps into the street to hail a car, he is in violation of the law there.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors.

Old Robert Burton.

My excuse for again writing a paper on this great genius, whom I considered from one point of view last October, is that I wish to call attention to the fact that his immortal work, "The Anatomy of Melancholy," is available in a recent issue of Everyman's Library, in three attractive volumes, with a charming introduction by the witty and graceful English writer, Holbrook Jackson. His introduction is worthy of the author—and I can think of no higher compliment.

Let me urge those who see these lines to buy the Everyman edition of "The Anatomy of Melancholy," unless, of course, you already possess the book in some other form.

When his work was published in 1621, although it was enormously large and enormously expensive, it became instantly a best seller, which speaks well for the taste of those times.

Through the rest of his life Burton kept making additions and corrections for successive editions; but after the third quarter of the seventeenth century, the book was neglected until the nineteenth; its quaint curiosties did not appeal to the men of the age of Pope and Swift and Addison. Yet later in the eighteenth century, Dr. Johnson said it was the only book that ever took him out of bed two hours sooner than he wished to rise. This remark of the doctor's is still quoted in every second-hand bookseller's catalogue, and is after so many years the most effective of all "blurbs." Johnson also said, "there is great spirit and great power in what Burton says."

I hope I may persuade some readers to secure a copy of this book; it will be a lifelong companion and friend.

Burton had originally intended to write the whole work in Latin, for he composed Latin as easily as English, but by God's mercy, he refrained; thus what would have been a mausoleum became a living fountain of wit, humor, shrewdness, wisdom, sympathy, understanding and tenderness. For it is remarkable that his solitary scholar, so profoundly learned, should have shown such boundless sympathy for all the weaknesses, vagaries, crimes, stupidities, passions and sins of humanity. He knew the human heart. He illuminates every subject to which he gives attention; whether he is talking of fishing, chess playing or the unmapped frontiers of human thought, his immense knowledge is always mellowed by sympathy.

The third part of the work, where he considers Love-Melancholy and Religious-Melancholy, was 300 years ahead of his time, in its psycho-analysis of tortured minds. And when, at the end of the first part, he discusses suicide, he says: "What shall become of their souls, God alone can tell: His mercy may come . . . betwixt the bridge and the brook, the knife and the throat . . . Who knows how he may be tempted? It is his case, it may be thine . . . We ought not to be so rash and rigorous in our censure as some are; charity will judge and hope the best; God be merciful unto us all!"

From his lonely room in Oxford, Burton surveyed the whole panorama of human nature. His own symptoms always interested him; and even his death had a peculiar gratification to him, because he died at the beginning of the Grand Climacteric, the age of 63.

Bail Set for 2 In Kidnap Case

Hearing Held in Norfolk for Pair Accused in Girl's Abduction.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 15 (AP).—Bervel Colson, charged under the new "Lindbergh" law with the kidnaping of Janice Walston, 7, was held under $25,000 bond today by United States Commissioner Harry A. Brinkley. Earl Boles, described by police as an accomplice, was held under $10,000 bond.

The warrant against Colson also contains white slave and motor vehicle theft charges. White slave charges pending against Boles for alleged transportation of Frances Yearby from Durham, N. C., to Virginia were dismissed.

Mildred Estelle Walston, the principal witness, said Colson came to her home here in January and, with a drawn gun, forced her into an automobile, drove her to North Carolina and forced her to lead a life of prostitution for five months. She asserted she escaped early in July and returned, going to Raleigh with Colson again for a few days.

On August 8, she said, while she was going to a telephone to make a call Boles had asked her to make to the Yearby girl, a car containing Colson, Boles and Miss Yearby drove up to the curb and she was ordered to get in. She testified that when she refused, her little sister, Janice, was placed in the car as well as herself. She said Colson only agreed to return the little girl to Virginia when she agreed to go with him anywhere and do as he said.

Navy Officer Away; Residence Robbed

Furnishings Are Taken at West Annapolis.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Lieut. Comdr. William A. Reifel, U. S. N., on duty at the Naval Academy, and family returned today from a month's vacation in Ohio and Michigan, to find that their residence in West Annapolis had been robbed of considerable valuable furnishings and personal effects.

The thief or thieves seemingly had a weakness for wearing apparel and bedroom furnishings, as articles of the sort made up the preponderance of loot. Silverware in the dining room and other similar valuables were not disturbed, but handsome comforts and other bed coverings that can not be duplicated were taken. The wardrobe of the maid in the household was cleaned out, the loot including a fine fur coat. Mrs. Reifel suffered similar losses. Lieut. Comdr. Reifel was left devoid of clothing, save his service uniforms, and the "civies" he carried with him on vacation.

The robbery was similar to others that have been committed at homes of naval folk and others during the last several weeks here.

Auction Put Off As Bid Is Refused

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Public sale of Elmhurst, property of the late C. W. Jones, was postponed yesterday, after a bid of $21,000 by John F. Gouldman, jr., had been refused.

Special commissioners decided to continue the auction Saturday when S. P. Powell, executor of the Jones estate, declared he would oppose court confirmation of the sale at $21,000. The property was previously appraised at $24,000.

The property consists of a house, dairy barn and tenant houses and 25 acres of land. Gouldman was the sole bidder on the entire property, single bidders being Mrs. S. P. Powell, W. W. Butzner and Mr. Gouldman. The total of the individual bids was $20,250.

Fairfax Group Urges Control Of Hog Farms

C. of C. Opposes Absolute Ban on Garbage Feeding.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 120-J.

The Chamber of Commerce of Fairfax County, Va., adopted a resolution in favor of giving the county board of supervisors authority to regulate commercial hog farms and other businesses which, in its judgment, may become nuisances. The action was taken by the trade body Tuesday night in the Grange Hall at Masonville.

Speakers were of the opinion that no general law prohibiting garbage feeding on commercial hog farms should be adopted by the supervisors, but all were opposed to garbage feeding in the more thickly populated sections of the county.

The major portion of the discussion concerning hog farms was on how such regulation could be enforced by the supervisors and whether additional authority would be needed when the State Assembly meets in 1936.

For several years county supervisors and local health authorities have attempted to regulate commercial garbage feeding on hog farms, so that offensive odors and other conditions would be remedied, but in each instance the courts failed to support the ordinances and regulations.

A committee consisting of W. S. Hoge, John W. Brookfield and Wells A. Sherman was appointed to study the possibility of establishing a Federal subsistance homestead project in Fairfax County, similar to the model plant being developed near Laurel, Md.

Representative from Manassas addressed the chamber on the fourth annual Piedmont Dairy Festival. The festival was indorsed by the chamber, which also pledged its cooperation in promoting the event.

The next meeting will be held in the Franconia School.

Dr. George Spicer Heads Milk Board

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Dr. George W. Spicer, professor of political science at the University of Virginia and chairman of the State commission on county government, today was appointed chairman of the milk board for the Charlottesville shed.

Prof. Tipton R. Snaveley, school of economics at the university and chairman of the Virginia Milk Commission, announced that the other four board members would be A. F. Howard, head of the Monticello Dairy, and T. R. Moore to represent the distributors; Phil H. Gentry, of the Albemarle County Board of Supervisors, and Dr. John L. Manahan, of the university, to represent the producers.

Appointment of the board followed an announcement from Richmond of the rules and regulations for the Charlottesville milk shed. The board set 13 cents per quart as the retail price on milk. It was estimated that this minimum price will mean an increase of as much as 3 cents a quart to at least one-third of Charlottesville consumers.

Lucinda E. Corcoran Becomes Wife of Dr. E. P. Childs.

Bride's Family Is Well Known in D. C. for Philanthropies.

One of the most important weddings of the season is that of Miss Lucinda Eustis Corcoran and Dr. Edward Patterson Childs, which was solemnized quietly yesterday at 1001 Park avenue, New York, residence of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Eustis Corcoran. Because of the illness of her father, the small company witnessing the ceremony was confined to the two families, other near relatives and a few close friends.

The Rev. Dr. George Frederick Clover, pastor and superintendent of St. Luke's Hospital in New York, read the simple service at noon, and afterward a small breakfast for those witnessing the marriage followed at the same place.

Miss Corcoran wore a simple wedding gown of ivory satin, which follows the new mode in its simplicity of design, and her veil was of tulle. Her only attendant was her sister-in-law, Mrs. William Eustis Corcoran, the former Miss Gertrude Stadelman, who with her husband came on from Akron, Ohio, for the wedding. Her costume was a chiffon dress in two shades of blue, with hat to match, and her flowers were delphinium. The bride's cousin, Mr. John H. G. Pell, served as Dr. Childs' best man.

Will Live in New York.

Immediately after the ceremony the young couple left on a short honeymoon, and upon their return they will be at home at 205 East Seventy-eighth street, New York.

This wedding is of interest in Washington, where the bride's family is well known because of their philanthropies. Her great-grandfather, the late William W. Corcoran, founded and endowed the Louise Home and the Corcoran Art Gallery, which houses the $3,000,000 collection of the late Senator William C. Clark and one of the finest collections of modern art in this country.

On the Eustis side, the bride's father, who four years ago took the name of his grandfather, is descended from a Colonial family that contributed to political life a Colonial Governor from Massachusetts and several members to both houses of Congress and to the diplomatic service. Mr. Corcoran is a nephew of the late Miss Celestine Eustis and a brother of the late Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, who did so much to stimulate interest in polo in this country, and of the late Mr. William Corcoran Eustis.

Kin of Mrs. W. A. Street.

The bride's mother is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Street, of New York, and a sister of Mr. Arthur F. Street, of Miss Susan Watts Street and of the late Mrs. Herbert Pell Townsend. She is a grandniece of the late Mrs. Levi P. Morton, whose husband served as Vice President of the United States under Benjamin Harrison, and also one time Governor of the State of New York, and is a niece of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, of Washington. Through her mother the bride is related to the Pell, Morgan and Kearny families.

Dr. Childs is a son of Mrs. Harry Robbins Childs, of 129 East Eighty-second street, New York, and of the late Mr. Childs, and he is a grandson of the late Edward Patterson, chief justice of the Appellate Court of the State of New York. He received his preparatory education at Groton and following his graduation in 1926 from Harvard he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he received his medical degree. He is a member of the Union Club.

Miss Corcoran was born at Eustis Lodge, her parents' Newport home, and attended Miss Chapin's School and Miss Hewitt's classes. She was presented to society by her parents in 1932.

Rockefeller, jr., also of New York, who are passing the summer at their place, The Eyrie, at Seal Harbor, Me.

The decision to have the wedding take place at the little town on the Ottauquechee River was prompted to a great extent by the desire of both families for a simple ceremony, such as would be impossible in town.

The Rev. Mr. Herbert Helnes officiated at the ceremony, which took place at 4:30 o'clock, and afterward there was a reception at The Hill, the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. French at Woodstock.

Shopper Finds 88c Will Get A Lot Today

Bedroom Slipper Prices Take a Big Fall for Thursday Only.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A LITTLE offhand investigating yesterday brought forth happy results in news of a sale today. The scene was a crowded shoe department of a downtown store. The principal actors were two clerks who were busy with several stacks of shoe boxes; the buyer who was marking down prices; and a shopper with a nose for news.

"Are these going to be advertised?" one of the clerks queried.

"No," answered the buyer. "They'll sell readily enough to those who see them!"

The news hound's nose twitched. "How much are they going to be?" she asked.

"Eighty-eight cents!"

"For how long?" her pencil was already busy.

"Thursday only! Real bargains aren't they?" The buyer surveyed the contents of the boxes proudly. The shopper peeped, too.

There were pairs and pairs of neat little leather fireside, or bedroom slippers, mannish, plain and very nice. She examined one and found that besides a Cuban heel and padded sole it had a soft quilted lining. They come in three colors, red, blue, and black.

"Those who prefer minimum priced slippers in a more feminine style will like those," said the buyer, pointing to some black fabric slippers with eyelet inserts. These have have many colored linings to offset their somber darkness. They are one dollar.

More News.

There was more news on the toilet goods counters in the form of new compacts. A beauty specialist who has a long line of popular creams and lotions has just put out a new compact, attractively colored cream and blue. Rouge comes in matching cases.

On the Spot.

It's on the spot! A new cleanser in odd bottles is known as a "spot remover." The bottles are long and lean with sponge fixtures under the black tops which screw off easily. In order to attack the spot in question, one tilts the bottle so the sponge is well saturated and then rubs over and around the soiled place. It only takes a minute before all signs of a spot have disappeared.

This cleanser is especially recommended for woolens, silks and satins, although it may be used on a variety of things—even shoes and bags. Price, 25 cents.

Such Exclamations!

Such bags at such prices! And such a variety of bags, and such a variety of prices! And such reductions! Such a sale!

After exclamations subside you can make a thorough tour and examine some of these bargains more closely.

There's a table given over to $10 and $12.50 bags, reduced to $4.95. Another table has $5 and $6.50 bags, now $2.95. Then there are $7.50 and $8.50 bags, $3.95. Finally the $3.50 ones, now $1.95.

As a sidelight: A certain vivid yellow and red bag of some light composition has been bought by no less than six men, and returned by no less than six women. Husbands come in looking for a gift for their wives. They're attracted by the bright colors and attractive shape of this bag. They buy. A day or so later, in walks the wife and swaps the bag for another one. But still it sells!

Scented Water Softener.

It's almost like going to the toilet goods department to buy one's sugar or flour to purchase some of the water softener featured in such a department of a local store. It comes safely sewed up in a heavy cloth sack looking for the world like a flour or sugar sack. The five pounds of it is sure to last a long time and will prove it's worth by both scenting the bath and making the water so soft that soap will lather freely and easily.

Book Prop.

Reading is a far more enjoyable pastime when it is done in comfort. A manufacturing concern believes this so thoroughly they have recently put out a book prop which solves the heavy book problem. This little metal frame clamps over the knee at any angle and holds the book open, supports its weight, and keeps your place.

It may also be used on a table to hold a book upright. Students will find it a big eye saver.

Those who like to read in bed may clamp it to their book and read in luxurious style.

Artists find it particularly convenient for holding pads firmly. Because it is easily adjustable; it is convenient for out-of-door work. Pianists find it splendid for holding sheet music.

Pastel Orange Sticks.

There is Florida to thank for the colorful packages of orange sticks on sale in a downtown store. If a rainbow could be broken up into kindling wood and then wrapped in cellophane, it would resemble these pastel orange sticks.

Those who use them will find the pure orange wood doesn't get soggy and lose its fine point and rounded edges.

Inside Parisian Sidewalk Cafe Is Food To Make Gourmets Swoon With Delight

French Cooking, Generally Conceded to Be Best in the World, Inspires Ecstatic Writing by Brillat Savarin.

Today we enter the kitchen of a nation that has for generations set highest standard of the world's cooking.

By Susan Mills.

AND you watch the world go by. So they speak of the Parisian sidewalk cafe. You may stop in for breakfast, sip cafe au lait, and munch croissants, those horn-shaped rolls that are as flaky as pastry; you may go to one for luncheon or, as is usually done, for a bottle of wine in the middle of the afternoon. Your friends and acquaintances pass and salute you; sometimes an artist will move between the tables and offer you his wares.

A synonym for relaxation and congeniality, the French sidewalk cafe. A step inside one of these, and laid before you is the food that makes France truly the "paradise of the gourmet." These carefully laid tables stand for Epicurean perfection.

Concerning Pheasant.

The following quotation from Brillat Savarin will perhaps exemplify the fastidiousness of a true French gourmet.

". . . the pheasant is a problem of which the solution is given only to the initiated. They alone enjoy to the full the excellence of this bird. If the bird is eaten within three days of its being shot, then its flesh has nothing particular about it. It is neither so tender as that of a capon, not so aromatic as that of the quail. At a certain moment only its flesh becomes wonderfully tender and attains the finest flavor. This desired moment is that when the pheasant just begins to decay. Then all the aroma develops, imparted by that fine oily discharge which springs from fermentation. This moment announces itself to the intiated by a slight smell and a change of color on the under part of the bird. Those who understand will guess the right moment by a kind of instinct, as a clever cook will see at a glance whether a fowl should be taken off the spit or should have a few more turns.

He Grows Rhapsodic.

"When the pheasant has reached this point it must be carefully plucked, and the finest, freshest bacon drawn through. It is not an unimportant question to ask whether or not the bird should be plucked at once when killed. Experience has shown that the pheasant when hung in its feathers has decidedly more aroma than the bird plucked before it is hung. It may be that the air absorbs part of the aroma, or that the nourishment of the feathers draws a certain juice and contributes to its tenderness."

He follows with an explanation of the preparation of the pheasant. Ingredients include truffles, anchovy, grated bacon, and a slice of orange as a garnish. He concludes: "A pheasant prepared and cooked in this way would be a dish worthy to set before the angels were they to appear wandering on this earth. . . . With this delicious dish Burgundy should be drunk. I have proved the truth of this after many observations, which have given me more work than a table of logarithms."

Recipes are in order. Here is one for a simple French omelette. Once mastered, it may be a base of many new and delicious dishes.

Omelette.

Whip three eggs with a pinch of salt and pepper. Melt an ounce of butter in a pan; when butter is hot pour in the eggs, stirring them with a fork to prevent sticking. When the eggs begin to thicken, stop stirring and allow bottom of the mixture to become solidified. Then draw the pan from the fire, fold it over, tilting the pan. Turn out on a dish and serve immediately.

Asparagus tips, lightly fried in butter, may be added just as the omelette is folded over. Mushrooms prepared in similar way are good. The omelette can be seasoned with fruit, fresh or canned; all kinds of liqueurs, like Curacao, Benedictine, or Chartreuse.

Spinach French Way.

It has been said that the French use a great deal of cream in cooking, but it is used well. Take, for instance, their preparation of spinach, that mass of horror to most children. Boil the spinach in salted water. Drain, and mince very fine. Add salt to taste, a lump of butter and a quarter of a pint of cream in which you have dissolved a spoonful of flour. Put on the fire again, and cook until it just reaches a boil. Serve on slices of French toast.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

THE 14-year-old girl who has outgrown dolls and has not yet acquired adult interests sometimes finds leisure hours hanging heavy on her hands. Collecting autographs may interest her when other hobbies do not.

Some friend or relative is likely to have a famous signature or two to start the collection. Then the fun lies in trying to get more of them. Many nationally known persons who write for the newspapers are willing to answer requests for autographs; the great and near-great are more apt than not to be nice about helping a child's collection to grow.

Mounting and labeling the autographs provides entertainment, and the collection will stimulate interest in writers, statesmen, industrialists and other celebrities and their achievements. Besides, if faithfully kept, it may be worth money some day!

Saturday: Baby Goes Picnicking.

What does your child collect? Suggestions will help other mothers. Names of correspondents will not be published if writers so indicate. Address Alice Fox Pitts, in care of The Washington Post.

POTOMAC PARK

By CAROLYN COX

Among the people with whom Wanda Mallory makes friends, when she finds a job in Washington, are Kentucky Queen, who is in love with Zeke Tolliver, a Congressman. Also Priscilla, who has won the affection of another of the crowd, Nick. She, however, flaunts her other suitors to annoy him.

AT 4 o'clock of George Washington's Birthday, Priscilla's so-called tea party was in full swing. The teapot chilled, forgotten, on the table. The perfect sunny morning had been replaced by a rainy, icy afternoon. Priscilla, keeping in mind the limitations of her apartment, had invited only a few extra guests.

Kentucky and Wanda had offered their assistance in the preliminaries of sandwich making, shopping, and glass polishing, but Priscilla had informed them that she had engaged a maid.

"She would," Kentucky remarked to Wanda with a twinkle in her clear eyes. "The boys and I give each other a helping hand, but Priscilla would have to engage a colored maid in uniform."

A few casual acquaintances drifted in and out for atmosphere. This, too, Priscilla managed well. They did not stay long.

Party Was Noisy.

On the surface, if noisy merriment is any indication, the party was a convivial success. Wanda, who failed to enter into the spirit of a drinking party, sat in the corner, wondered what was keeping David anyway, and felt the contrary pull of undercurrents.

Priscilla was tense with effort to distinguish herself as a gracious hostess. She had no time for languor.

Zephyr telephoned at the last moment and did not appear. Royce was disgruntled, but somewhat appeased when Mr. Tolliver's expectant look was replaced by chagrin.

Zeke thinks Priscilla tricked him into coming, Wanda thought. She did, too, but I'm glad she did. Kentucky, for all she is so calm outside, fairly radiates contentment when Zeke is around. Royce is disappointed, but if Mr. Tolliver were not here, he'd be black with suspicion that Zephyr had gone to some other party with Zeke. And that, thought Wanda, viewing a new arrival, must be Priscilla's Big Moment. Nick is showing entirely too much interest in him—another triumph for the hostess.

Wanda scrutinized the newcomer. He had a smooth head, thick neck and stocky frame. Not without ability, she decided: a little coarse; a good mixer on the lower levels; a widower, she remembered that Priscilla had said once. A good club member, a jolly good fellow with the boys, out to build up the town, the local sports, to put the city on the map.

Tea Party Lobbyist.

Priscilla introduced him pridefully to the others, and rather anxiously to Zeke. Wanda's intuition leaped into the gap: This tea party was the initiation of her hostess into the gentle art of lobbying. She had given it in order that her friend, Mr. Carlin, might ask a favor of Mr. Ezekiel Tolliver, Member of Congress. It was therefore imperative that he should be presented in a favorable light, and that Mr. Tolliver should enjoy the party.

In the language of commerce, Peter W. Carlin, cosmetics manufacturer, had sold himself upon his big idea and had come down to Washington to sell it to the Government. For weeks he had seesawed between hope and despair. He had been upon the point of giving up when Priscilla had her bright idea of a tea party in order to introduce him to her personal friend, Mr. Tolliver, Congressman-at-large, from Kentucky.

If he had a factory which manufactured an essential product and employed a large number of persons, and could show that the loan would be self-liquidating in a reasonable time, he could borrow from the Government—or so he had been told. Into the category of essential products he was unable to fit deep-pore skin cleansers, muscle oils, lily hand lotions and greaseless tissue builders. But one of the research chemists in the cosmetics laboratory had chanced upon a secret formula for an undeveloped vegetable dye. Good! His factory could be expanded for the manufacture of dyes.

Cold Response.

Carlin, steady on his legs, outwardly sober but inwardly palsied, already in the mental state of hugging a lamp post, swallowed one cocktail after another in his nervousness while he prepared to seize the golden bull of opportunity by the horns. He had a tenacious memory for figures, but his ideas just now were nebulous and chimerical. He led up to his topic easily enough and made a fair beginning.

Carlin's earnestness, had he been sober, might have won Zeke's support, but now he was coldly irresponsive. Royce and Nick, from different motives but with a single purpose, kept his glass filled. They could see that he would be amusing if drunk enough, and Nick was eager to prove that Priscilla's lion was only a jackass.

He prodded Carlin to discourse on government and bombarded him with questions to confound his addled brain. He so bewildered his protagonist that when the telephone rang, Priscilla welcomed it. Conversation stopped.

Call for Carlin.

"Who? Mr. Carlin? Yes, he's here . . . It's for you, Peter."

Mr. Carlin bounced from his seat in joyous anticipation.

"Tell him what?" Priscilla asked sweetly, while Peter W. Carlin did a top-spin of anxiety and tried to put his ear to the receiver also. "Yes, I can hear now. Tell him—that Mr. Dovetail has big news just downstairs——"

"I knew it was Dovey!" Carlin twittered. "Had a hunch. By Gad; It's goin' over. Sure as sin! Excuse me. My hat, please. My hat—my hat!"

He held out both hands, palms upturned expectantly, making half spins toward one guest then another, as if wondering who had his hat.

Priscilla made the most of her moment of triumph. Her friend, Peter W. Carlin, was about to sign a big contract. She drew herself up to regal height.

"Gardenia, get Mr. Carlin's hat and coat."

"Just my hat," Carlin corrected. "I'll come back for my coat."

His outstretched hands and general basket ball attitude were too much for Nick. He tossed a sofa pillow. When it touched Carlin's fingers, they closed upon it with reflex grip, he breathed a sigh of relief, clapped the pillow on his head and dashed out of the door.

Nick Felt Playful.

Gardenia appeared with his hat, which she waved helplessly in search of an owner until Nick relieved her of the responsibility for the derby by holding out his hand.

"I'll take care of it, Gardenia."

Nick extracted the maximum humor from Carlin's derby hat. He made funny noises on his skull with it, supplementing them with ventriloquial sounds of the unpopular berry. He put it on. It was large and his head was not. He could wriggle his scalp and ears at will. He wriggled them now—and the hat.

His jealousy of Peter W. Carlin, unwholesomely suppressed through the weeks, was sublimated now in soul-purging humor. He was teasing Priscilla unmercifully, and his glee grew in proportion to her fury. He looked at the initials on the hat band.

"P. W. G.—Public Works Chiseler!"

"Nick!" warned Kentucky.

Zeke, moved by Priscilla's supplicating gaze, decided that she had been punished enough for the attempted sin of lobbying.

"I've enjoyed the afternoon, Miss Starr," he said, rising. "If I'm not dragging you away from the party, Kentucky, I'd like to see that article in the home paper you were talking about."

"Certainly, Zeke. Come up with me and read it. You'll excuse us, won't you, Priscilla?"

The reluctance of the hostess fell short of politeness. Gardenia brought Zeke's coat and hat. Kentucky, of course, had come down from the apartment without wraps. Royce went out with them, having some work to do, he said. Wanda lingered, still hoping that David might drop in, and also giving Kentucky the opportunity for a few words alone with Tolliver.

Gardenia carried the glasses into the kitchen. Priscilla turned savagely upon Nick.

"I hate you!" she stormed. "You made a fool of my guest and ruined my party. I hope I never see you again."

She laid her head on the table and began to sob.

What Today Means

"Leo"

If August 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:15 a. m. to 1:15 p. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 5:15 to 7:15 p. m., and from 10:15 p. m. until midnight.

On this August 16 you may find that persistent endeavor will be the medium through which satisfactory results can be obtained. The person who loafs on the job on this date will only experience a feeling of great dissatisfaction as the day draws to a close.

If a woman and August 16 is your natal day, you probably are endowed with an unusual number of accomplishments. Show your gratitude by never allowing your good fortune to cause you to assume a supercilious poise with those less fortunate. Any form of educational literary, or economic research work may offer unlimited opportunities. If artistically inclined, one of the arts, if seriously taken up, may enable you to achieve unexpected recognition. Your happiness in matrimonial life can be depended on, providing you do not indulge in temperament.

The child born on August 16, as it grows up, should not be subjected to the handicap spoiling creates. If over-indulged, this child might take advantage of it, and as it grows older prove difficult to control.

If a man and August 16 is your natal day, you are very likely conscious that you possess a mentality much better developed than the average man's. If you allow this knowledge to make you egotistical, it might prove to be a curse instead of a blessing, so be guided accordingly. The political field, journalism, and the legal profession all present lines of activity for a man of your ability. Home life is advisable for one of your nature, providing you marry a woman intellectually your equal.

Scantily Clad Girls Try To Evade Police at Coney

Girls in scanty bathing suits hopped hurriedly into the waves or tried to burrow in the sand yesterday when 40 policewomen descended upon Coney Island. Although no arrests were made the feminine officers told several young women what was wrong with their swimming costumes and informed men with dangling shoulder straps that they were flouting regulations. The police army also halted the petting of a few couples.

Femininity Keeps Its Chin Up This Fall Because of All the Neckline Frou Frou

Which Means the Best Line Is Still One That Muffles the Throat.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—It's "chins up" for everybody this fall. Not to keep hats from sliding down the nose, though many do tilt pretty far forward. But there's so much of your dress trimming concentrated right underneath the chin that if you let it drop you'll crush a bow, disarrange a scarf or otherwise upset your decorative equilibrium.

All that means, of course, that the most fashionable neckline is still the one which comes up fairly high, well up to the base of the throat.

A few are lower, but not low enough to give you a naked look. And even when lower they're seldom plain. They have some trick of trimming to them.

Bows and Scarfs.

There are all sorts of bows and scarfs to give you a muffled-up look. Ascot scarfs are used to fill in some necklines in a vestee effect. Other Ascots hang outside the dress neckline.

Then there are more loosely tied scarfs, and scarfs which are really the elongated ends of a yoke and which loop over at one side, as in the sketch at the lower left.

A scarf of some kind is the big idea in the very tailored dresses. But crisp or soft bows are almost as popular.

Sometimes the bows are tied right up under the chin, as in the sketch at the top right. Sometimes they are tied part way down the bodice of the dress. And other times they are put on as an extra decoration, not like a real part of the dress, off to one side of slanting crosswise along the line of a surplice closing.

Chinese Collars.

When there isn't a bow or a scarf there are still various ways of muffling up the neck. Little collars of the Chinese variety, but less severe than they were last year, stand up or roll over round the base of the throat, as in the neckline sketched at the lower right.

Ruff-like collars, too, are close to the throat, but much softer than they were in the spring versions. They are shirred or gathered so they fall softly and becomingly. You can see one of these in the sketch at the upper left.

Some of them come up even higher and closer than this and often they open at the back instead of the front.

Some of the necklines are very individual and very different. A collar invented by Schiaparelli is made like a round flat disk and stands out stiff from the base of the throat. Narrow scarfs are run under tabs.

Revers are still liked and sometimes they are softened by ruffling or shirring.

All these different kinds of necklines make it easy, of course, to pick one which is becoming. And since most of them are soft, almost any one will be flattering.

(Copyright, 1934.)

Dresses with necklines of the type described are available in Washington in all the better dress shops and department stores.

Fainting Fish That Way Because of the Humidity

It's not the heat, it's the humidity that induces fainting spells in fish.

During a recent humid spell the curators of the New York Aquarium noticed many fish were rising to the surface with an unhealthy look around their gills. It was necessary to call upon the aquarium's emergency squad to pump oxygen into the water. Otherwise the fainting fish would soon have been dead fish. Even with the emergency squad doing its noblest, seven fish folded their fins and passed out completely. Hundreds of others, however, were saved.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Harvest Mites or Chiggers.

The so-called harvest mite is fairly abundant throughout the United States, and in many sections it is impossible to walk across a field or a grass plot without becoming a prey to these annoying parasites. Chiggers that attack man are larvae forms possessing three pairs of legs, and are various species of the genus Trombidium. One of the most common is the so-called Mexican chigger.

These mites are supposed to feed upon insects and insect eggs, but they have become parasitic to man, and are particularly annoying when they burrow down a hair follicle or a sweat gland. From the bottom of the follicle or of the gland they are able to cut their way through the skin. They do not bore into or through the skin or excavate channels, as is the habit of the female itch mite that causes scabies.

At first the chigger feeds on the surface of the skin, causing marked reddening and irritation. In this situation the parasite is not buried, but if irritated or attacked, as by scratching, it is able to retreat rapidly down a hair follicle or sweat gland. The irritation caused by the mite is greatly increased by the scratching that one automatically indulges in to allay the intolerable itching, and thus the skin is frequently infected by the finger nails or the clothing.

Attacks may be prevented by the use of powdered sulphur. This may be dusted over the skin of the legs and a small quantity placed in each stocking. Sulphur is an almost certain preventive of mite infestation. Powdered naphthalene, the substance composing mothballs, may be used with apparently the same effect. Napthalene has, in addition, the value of discouraging numerous other biting insects.

Great relief from itching may be obtained by taking a warm salt bath or by killing the mites in their lairs by the application of benzine, sulphur ointment or carbolized vaseline. A drop or two of chloroform may be used at the site of the swelling caused by the bite. This drug will gradually work down the hair follicle or into the bottom of the sebaceous gland, and if applied frequently will kill the insect.

American Women Survey Their Emancipation and Query Its Effect on Marriage

Careers Are Found an Aid To Successful Married Life

Although French Women Are About Where American Women Were 25 Years Ago, a Few Who Have Careers Are Happy, Matrimonially Speaking.

The Countess de Lormay recently returned to this country from France, where for several years she lectured on American life.

By the Countess de Lormay.

THE French woman today is where the American woman was about 25 years ago. She is becoming aware of herself as an entity. She is agitating the question of women's votes. She wants civic rights. She doesn't want to ask her divorced husband's permission to send her child to a certain school. She wants the right to inherit money from her parents without her husband's consent. Mme. Beddoukh, suffrage leader of Marseilles, told me she had lost her father's legacy because her husband, from whom she was getting a divorce, would not sign the necessary papers giving his consent.

After the war, when American women took up careers, they entered into professions, business, the Government and became leaders in their respective fields. On the other hand, the French woman replaced the man on the farm, in the factory and on the street cars. Her education and background had not fitted her for the higher positions.

However, the American woman now successful in her chosen career is wondering how her personal ambition affects marriage. Is there a high correlation between careers and the ever-increasing number of divorces?

Mrs. George Oakley Totten, widely known Washington artist, when asked, "Do you believe careers interfere with marriage?" answered, emphatically, "Not at all!" Then she added, "It is very good to have a career. It gives wider and broader interests to a woman. Furthermore, it is good for a woman to work and feel she is earning.

Work Together.

"My husband and I have so much in common. He is an architect and I an artist. He does the buildings and I decorate the interiors. I hope soon to make some murals in Government buildings. I certainly am in favor of careers for women. As for the children, there is always plenty of time for them. Besides they take an interest in their mother's work."

Dr. Frances Moon Butts, writer, educator and president of the District of Columbia League of American Pen Women, is a strong advocate of careers for women.

"I feel very strongly on that point," she said. "My first experience in life was as the wife of a physician. Then I devoted most of my time to my home and social duties, including clubs. The club work was something that balanced the ennui in the four walls of a home. I desired, as the wife of a physician, to have a career, but my husband objected because he had the old-fashioned idea that the wife of a professional man should stay in the home. After his death I went into education, but I kept up the home for my son. I felt I was able to do it better by having outside contacts and broader experiences."

Asked if she thought careers for women were an important factor in the increase of divorce, she replied, "No, I do not. If a woman is successful outside of the home, it tends to increase the respect and admiration she receives within the home. I believe divorces are due principally to three causes: incompatibility, economic troubles and lack of intellectual congeniality.

Career Mends Troubles.

"A man will carry a woman not on his intellectual level. It flatters him. But he becomes bored with her later. The career helps to mend all three of these causes. Women have to cooperate, put up with things whether they like them or not, in the outside world. It whets their intellect, makes them more agreeable. And, of course, it increases the family income. I feel that the primary cause of trouble in the home, as well as among nations, is an economic one. If nations could learn to have kindly economic relations there would be no wars. So it is with people."

Miss Mary Bak, editor of the newspaper syndicate, who recently was the house guest of Phyllis Moore Gallagher, author, at Wardman Park Hotel, told me over our teacups, "A career is a real asset in a wife. Especially is this true of any woman married to a man who is mentally alert and in touch with all that is happening in our ever-changing era.

"There are many examples in the field of literature where the husband and wife are pursuing careers and both are ideally happy. Not only in our day, but in the past as well. For instance, Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett. Both were brilliant. Their home was the rendezvous for the best minds of the day. All this did not change the fact they are among the world's greatest lovers. Today we have such combinations as Kathleen Norris and Charles G. Norris, F. Scott Fitzgerald and Zelda Fitzgerald, and countless others."

There are some cases, however, where the woman has sacrificed her home for her career. Mme. Beddouhk agreed with me on this.

She said: "When you are working for a cause, as I have been doing, you have to throw yourself into it heart and soul. I have had a difficult task to make my countrywomen realize the necessity of votes and civic rights. After many years of work I am beginning to see some success. But, what has it cost me?

At Cost of Happiness.

"It has cost me my personal happiness in the loss of my husband. I had no time to think of such things as my hair, my hands, my clothes and other little things that a woman usually stresses so. I had no time to hover about my husband and make him realize how much he really meant to me. I was constantly planning women's meetings, talks and campaigns.

"He became lonely and, inevitably, met another woman. Divorce followed. Although I was heartbroken, I had to keep right on with my work, for I felt it was a great cause. Of course, this is an exaggerated case, just as in England and in America women were put into prison at the beginning of the agitation for women's votes. So everywhere there have to be some sacrifices when you are starting something very new. Looking back upon it now, I feel that if I had taken a little time to think of my personal appearance and the little things that contribute to a woman's charm I could have successfully managed both my career and my home."

On the other hand, Mme. Boyet is an example of a successful business woman who has a happy home, devoted husband, splendid children. She is an importer of fine wood for piano making and deals with large business houses in several foreign countries. Her ability is so outstanding that the other importers of Marseilles (who at first looked at her askance) not only have invited her to join their association, but have recently made her their president.

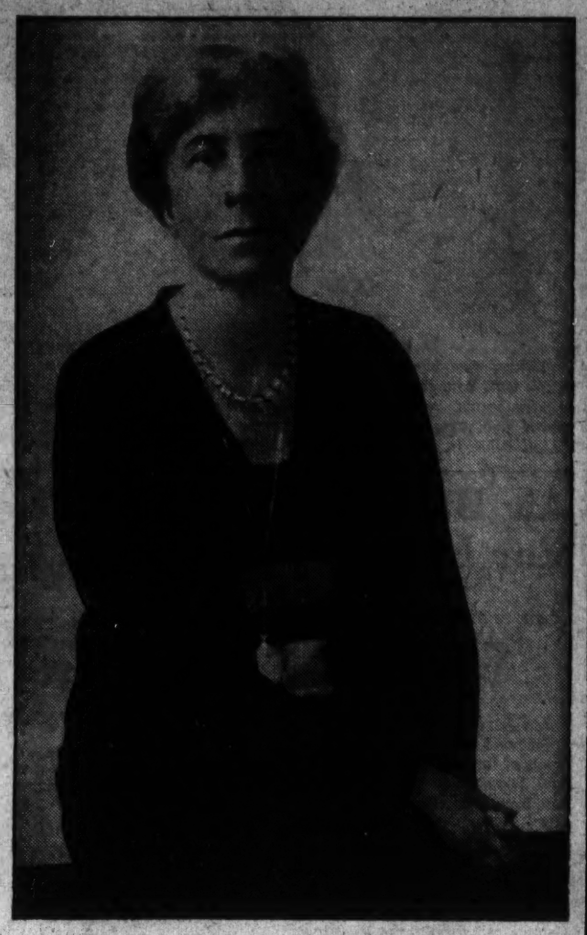
Life Is an Answer.

In France, this honor for a woman is extraordinary. Her husband is associated with her, and appreciates her superior ability. He looks after the domestic business and leaves the foreign business in her capable hands.

She is always beautifully gowned; her hair, skin and hands receive systematic attention. She is approaching 40 and manages to look dainty, winsome and young. Her two boys adore her. Everyone wants her at social functions as well as at the women's clubs. She has kept her femininity and it has been an asset to her. She is the type who can have a career and be successful as a wife and mother. When I asked Madame Boyet about careers, she laughed and said, "My life is my answer to that question!"

Mme. Hugonnier is the principal of a large normal school for girls in France. She has four charming children. Her husband is devoted to her and to his home. She has been most conscientious in the affairs of the school, knows every student personally and cooperates with all the teachers on the faculty. She is one of the civic leaders of the community.

With her youngest child on her knee, she told me, "I make it my business to be with my family several hours each day. I romp with the small children, I talk with the older ones. I encourage them in their studies and join them in their games. I try to be a real companion to my husband. We read the same books, discuss them together, go to concerts, entertain and visit friends. In the summer, we go on long car rides, camp, picnic and swim. I never forget that first and foremost I am a wife and mother. I never let anything make me forget that I am a woman."



Harris & Ewing.

Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreth, above, famous consulting engineer, of Montclair, N. J., and mother of 11 children, is a notable example of a career-mother. Mrs. George Oakley Totten, Washington artist, believes career-women make successful wives.

Famous Couturier Dependent on Dole

Paris, Aug. 15 (AP).—Still living in his penthouse apartment, but dependent for food and clothing upon charity and a 70-cent daily unemployment dole, Paul Poiret is dreaming of a come-back in the dressmaking realm he once ruled.

"I spend most of my time with scissors and cloth," said the former king of Paris dressmakers today as he told of his misfortunes. "I cut out dresses. Sometime someone will buy one and I will start on the road back to success."

"I haven't given up," he said firmly, although he has been out of work for 18 months.

He does not know how much longer he will be able to keep the penthouse apartment, sole remaining sign of his former great wealth.

"There is a little charity restaurant not far from where I live," explained the man who 10 years ago was numbered among the most wealthy in France, "and friends have been kind about giving me clothes."

Once Poiret's entertainments in his chateaux and on his three yatchts attracted the aristocracy of the world.

The 1929 crash started his financial downfall, and houses, boats, automobiles and other possessions went one at a time to meet obligations and pay necessary expenses.

Finally there was nothing left to sell.

"I stand in line with thousands of other penniless persons waiting to have my card punched and get a few sous," he said.

Orcutt Mixes Sport, Politics

Champion, Running for Jersey House, Takes Time Out for Golf.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

"WHEN I agreed to be put up for assemblywoman," Maureen Orcutt says, "I firmly explained that I was going to play in golf tournaments during electioneering season. And I was promised that I'd be let off speech-making long enough to play golf."

In such ruthless fashion are the political plans of New Jersey put in their place by women's sports.

The campaign program calls for an itinerant round of speeches, sometimes several in one evening. Such a hectic program, and the calm nerves needed for golf tournaments should mix like oil and water. But Miss Orcutt believes that she can either keep her sports and politics separate, or mix them well.

She frankly admits that she doesn't know anything about politics, but she says that she doesn't see why she can't learn. She is as confident of winning the election, as she is of winning a golf tournament in which she knows her opponents.

The National championship this year lies between Miss Orcutt and Virginia Van Wie, barring an always possible upset. Miss Orcutt has a stiff fight ahead of her to defeat Miss Van Wie, the defending champion. But the prospect doesn't seem to worry her, since she takes it in her political stride.

The hardest part of her program, during the next few weeks, will be making time for sufficiently long and regular golf practices.

Her startled public may expect to find Miss Orcutt, busily following her little white ball around the course, and telling a bunker and a couple of caddies how the State of New Jersey should be run.

Thirteen Rules Show the Way To Eye Beauty

Eyelash and Eyebrow Cosmetics Must Give a Natural Effect.

By Frances Mangum.

WHEN a woman makes up her eyes so they look artificial, her technique is all wrong. For eyelash and eyebrow cosmetics applied skillfully should look as though they were the handiwork of nature.

If you aren't sure what to do and what not to do you should follow 13 simple rules.

1. Don't apply mascara, eyeshadow and pencil too generously. Apply a tiny bit at first, and then add more if necessary.
2. Don't use any color of eye cosmetic. Choose the correct colors to harmonize with your eyes, skin and hair.
3. Don't put much mascara on the lower lashes. It destroys all expression and makes you look wooden.
4. Don't draw a line of eyebrow pencil under the eye. It hardens your features.
5. Don't bead the lashes. Apply mascara by brushing it on lightly. Then use a clean brush to separate the individual lashes and to remove excess mascara.
6. Don't apply mascara on the short lashes in toward the nose if your eyes are set close together.
7. Don't mascara all the upper lashes too evenly. Concentrate the color on the outer lashes to give the eyes length.
8. Don't us eyeshadow if your eyes are deep set. Normally set eyes or those slightly prominent can wear eyeshadow to great advantage.
9. Don't apply shadow high on the lid for daytime. Apply only a faint line of it, close to the base of the lashes.
10. Don't draw a single fine line for an eyebrow. Try short, slanting strokes of the pencil for naturalness.
11. Don't use black mascara if you are blond. Wear blue or brown instead.
12. Don't neglect to use a good eyelash grower or tonic cream on your lashes nightly to promote their growth and to keep them shining and silky. Neglected lashes become brittle and dull.
13. Don't make up the eyes without first using a clean brush to remove face powder from brows and lashes.

Alimony Demanded For Second Husband

The responsibility of divorced husbands for their former wives' support has been recognized by courts from coast to coast in decreeing alimony. But a New York judge decided it was carrying things a bit too far when a divorcee demanded her first husband be made to help support her second.

Mrs. Mary Vocel Day divorced Frank Vocel about ten years ago and from that time until her second marriage, in 1931, Mr. Vocel paid alimony of $10 a week. The payments stopped with the second marriage. This was all right with the bride until Husband No. 2 got out of a job. Then Mr. Vocel was told by his former wife that $10 a week from him would come in handy. Mr. Vocel couldn't see it that way. Neither could the judge.

New Dealers Get Dialects Studied

The accents and dialects of New Dealers are being studied by language students at the summer session of Columbia University, New York.

Phonograph records of speeches made by President Roosevelt, members of his Cabinet and other prominent men in Washington are being analyzed under direction of Prof. William Cabell Greet. Among those speeches being studied are Senator Huey Long, Rexford Guy Tugwell and Prof. Raymond Moley.

Prof. Greet seven years ago began to collect records showing the dialects in use throughout the country.

This fall he will seek to make Columbia undergraduates speech-conscious by instituting a two-year course in speech correction. Columbia freshmen will have records made of their recitations of "Grip, the Baby Rat," fairy tale, with words and phrases that may be pronounced several ways.

The Comptroller Returns With Stories of High Prices in France

J. F. T. O'CONNOR, Comptroller of Currency, returned from Europe about the same time President Roosevelt came back to Washington. "Isn't it remarkable," he marveled, "that the President could go on a 15,000-mile trip, the Vice President spend his time fishing in Texas, most of the Cabinet be out of town and Congress away, and nothing serious happen to disturb the Government? Hitler couldn't do it, nor most of the rulers in this world of 24-hour governments. It is a striking tribute to the common sense of the American people, that the President could come back and pick up his duties without anything unpleasant occurring in the meantime."

* * * *

Living for Americans is about three times as expensive in France as it is here, testified Mr. O'Connor; and food is very high. He told of having a dinner with Frank A. Vanderlip, jr., at a small restaurant in Paris where the food was no better than one could get here for 75 cents. It cost 102 francs, or about $7.00. Oranges cost 98 cents a dozen; beans 60 cents a quart; lamb chops 90 cents a pound; water 35 cents a bottle; matches 10 cents a box; gasoline 92 cents a gallon.

* * * *

Continuous-run movies in Paris charge from 20 to 35 francs for orchestra seats, or from $1.35 to $2.50. The legitimate shows charge from 75 francs up. The new Ford sells for 32,000 francs—$2,030!

* * * *

Mr. O'Connor also dined with Joseph Schenck in Paris, and the latter gave him a definition of a moving picture producer.

"A moving picture producer," said the United Artists executive, "is a man who knows what he wants, but can't spell it."

La Pompadour Still Exerting Famous Wiles

Man Toasted Her Portrait for 20 Years; Now Portrait's His.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Though dead 174 years, Mme. Pompadour, mistress of Louis XV, and one-time fashion queen of Paris, is still exerting her mysterious influence over men.

Three times a day for 20 years, Robert N. Bechtel, resident buyer for department stores, toasted the full-length portrait of Mme. Pompadour which hangs in the main dining room of the Hotel Martinique, Broadway and Thirty-second street. At the end of each day, he went to the manager of the hotel and asked to buy the picture.

The manager refused the request on the ground that the Louis XV effect of the room would be lost if the Pompadour picture were removed.

"But if we ever decide to take all the paintings down," he told Bechtel, "you shall have your Mme. Pompadour."

Yesterday the paintings were taken down and Mr. Bechtel was given the one of Pompadour.

He said he would probably have it cut to a square canvas and hung in his hotel room. Explaining his interest in the famous French siren, Mr. Bechtel said, "Mme. Pompadour always intrigued me. I'm unmarried. She was always sort of a Quantity X for me, if you know what I mean."

Mr. Bechtel said that even though the picture was removed from the hotel dining room, he would continue drinking his toasts to it. Explaining that he was never a heavy drinker, he said he had drunk the toasts as a matter of sentiment and had even managed during prohibition to get enough liquor for his ritual.

The painting of Mme. Pompadour was done about 30 years ago by Irving Wiley. It has been admired by many famous persons, including "Diamond Jim" Brady, Charles "Bet-a-Million" Gates and H. P. Whitney.

Elks' Meeting Ends With Big Parade, Dance

New Officers Installed at Its Final Session in Hagerstown, Md.

By J. E. Hager.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 15.—The fourteenth annual Tri-States Elks Association convention closed tonight with a big street parade and the "purple bubble ball" held at the Fair Grounds Auditorium.

With ten bands and drum corps and approximately 4,000 members of the association and visiting Elks in line, with floats and uniform bodies, the parade was one of the most colorful ever seen here.

Harold E. Coburn, of Havre de Grace, who was yesterday elected president of the association, and other officers were formally installed today.

The musical groups in the parade were the Municipal Band, Hagerstown; Wayne Band, the Boys Band, Waynesboro, Pa.; Y. M. C. A. Band, Hagerstown; Waynesboro Elks Boys Band, Havre de Grace Boys Band, Baltimore Band, Drum Corps from Cumberland, Frederick and Annapolis.

A drill team from Gettysburg also participated.

Organized Elks bodies from Annapolis, Frederick, Baltimore, Havre de Grace, Waynesboro, Gettysburg, Hagerstown and Washington participated in the parade.

One of the features today was concerts from the band stand in the public square by the Washington and Havre de Grace Boys Elks Bands.

Among the prominent Elks attending the convention are E. J. Fleming, past exalted ruler of the Alexandria (Va.) Lodge, and J. O. Lynch, trustee of the Alexandria Lodge.

The parade prize winners follow:

Bands—First, Washington Elks; second, Waynesboro, Pa., School Band.

Drum Corps—Frederick; lodge coming longest distance, 20 or more in line, Havre de Grace; lodge with largest number in line, first, Waynesboro; second, Frederick; lodge making best appearance, first, Waynesboro; second, Frederick.

Wife Divorces Cyrus S. Eaton

Elaborate Settlement Is Made by Financier in Ohio Action.

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 15 (AP).—On the grounds of "mental cruelty," Mrs. Cyrus S. Eaton, wife of the Cleveland financier, today was granted a divorce here in common pleas court.

Neither of the Eatons was present when Judge Doyle granted the decree. The financier was reported to be vacationing at Deep Cove, Nova Scotia, and his wife was said to be in London.

Judge Doyle ruled that the couple's seven children, all except one of whom are over 10 years of age, may choose for themselves the parent with whom they wish to live.

An elaborate property settlement was attached to the decree. It provides that Mrs. Eaton shall receive the use of Arrow Cottage and 61 acres of land surrounding it, at Northfield, near here, until such time as Eaton pays her $35,000 to purchase another home. The financier retains his larger residence not far from the cottage, but is required by the settlement to pay the $35,000 "if and when his net worth becomes $105,000."

Eaton's wealth was depleted by several million dollars by the depression.

The settlement also called for the financier to pay her 30 per cent of his net income, or $250 a month for the remaining months of 1934, with increases of $50 a month each year until 1938. The monthly payments would be terminated, however, at any time Eaton should make a lump payment of $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Eaton were married December 29, 1907.

Fifteenth Baby, Not Figured On, Christened "P. S."

Rock Rapids, Iowa, Aug. 15 (U.P.). The newest baby at the home of Roy Bowen has been christened Patricia Sue, and will be called by her initials, "P. S." or "Postscript," for short.

Bowen, who last year named his fourteenth child "Finis," and swore she was the last child in the family, agreed with his wife today on a name for the new arrival, after considering "Postscript," "Epilogue" and "Encore" as possible suitable appellations.

"If there's another baby," Bowen said, "we'll call it 'Annex.'"

Colorado Police Seek Dillinger Aid

"Baby Face" Nelson Faces "Shoot to Kill" Order.

Denver, Aug. 15 (AP).—"Shoot to kill" search for George "Baby Face" Nelson, the late John Dillinger's lieutenant, was started in Colorado today after a motor car in which Nelson and a woman companion were reported to be riding was seen here twice.

A 12-cylinder car bearing the man and woman drove into a filling station last night and obtained gasoline. They are believed to be the same couple who participated in a Salt Lake City robbery Sunday, police said.

Death for Traitors Advocated by Legion

San Francisco, Aug. 15 (AP).—A resolution demanding the death penalty for treason was voted down by the American Legion, Department of California, at its convention today.

Homer L. Chaillaux, department commander, then announced the proposition which would have asked the California Legislature to pass laws with the death penalty for persons convicted of insurrection against the State had been rejected.

Fugitive Back In Death Cell

Texas Gunman Who Fled Prison Twice Caught in Kentucky.

Huntsville, Tex., Aug. 15 (AP).—Shackled and closely guarded, Joe Palmer was brought back from Paducah, Ky., today and locked in the same death cell from which he escaped July 22 in Texas' most spectacular prison break.

"Same durn scenery," the condemned gunman muttered as the cell door clanged behind him. Palmer, who twice this year escaped prison, will be electrocuted late in the year for shooting a prison guard.

The desperado was sentenced to death for the slaying of Major Crowson, guard at Eastham State Prison farm, in a bloody break there January 16. He was retaken and, while in the State penitentiary here awaiting execution, participated in the July escape.

Several convicts were shot down in trying to go over the prison wall but Palmer, Raymond Hamilton and Irvin (Blackie) Thompson reached the outside and sped away in waiting cars. Palmer was caught at Paducah a few days ago. Hamilton and Thompson remain at large.

Air Hunt Vain For Lost Boy

Two Scout Companions in Fishing Party Are Badly Hurt.

Los Angeles, Aug. 15 (AP).—Search by air and on foot over treacherous trails of the San Gabriel Mountains for 14-year-old Vincent Slocum, lost from a Boy Scout fishing party since Monday, was unavailing today.

The Volunteer, a blimp operated by a commercial concern in Los Angeles, took up the hunt. Two sheriff's officers accompanied the pilot in a flight over White Oak Canyon, where Slocum and three companions became separated.

Two of the lads, Edward Ketton, 14, of Redondo Beach, and Fred Lippert, 14, of Torrance, were seriously injured in falls over cliffs late Monday. John Gilmer found his way back to the scout camp and summoned aid from forest rangers for Lippert.

Lippert fell 150 feet down a ravine and suffered a broken leg, cuts and internal injuries. Ketton was found early yesterday after he had lain all night wedged between two huge bolders. His skull was fractured and his condition is critical.

Farmer Sues U. S. For Calf's Death By Federal Paint

The Commerce Department is being sued for $20, the price of a calf that died after licking the paint off the bottom of a Federal radio beacon.

An unnamed Midwestern farmer is the plaintiff.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper served notice that he will fight the case, holding that if the farmer fed the calf enough salt he wouldn't have licked the paint and died. Roper also feels that the claim should be offset by the cost of the paint job ruined by the calf.

Upton Sinclair Accused In $105,000 Libel Suit

Los Angeles, Aug. 15 (AP).—Upton Sinclair, writer, seeking the Democratic nomination for Governor, was named defendant today in a $105,000 damage suit, charging libel and slander, filed by George L. Sanders, publisher of the political weekly, Public Opinion.

Named with Sinclair as defendants were Ralph W. Evans, candidate for the State Assembly; A. A. Hatch, described as manager of the Sinclair and Evans campaigns, and Attorney Saul S. Klein.

Head of Cuban Army Spurns Duel Challenge

Counters With Charge Foe Sought His Aid in Revolt Plot.

Havana, Aug. 15 (AP).—Fulgencio Batista, commander in chief of the Cuban army, challenged to a duel by one of Cuba's most prominent politicians, struck back at his challenger tonight with charges of attempting a coup against the government.

The former army sergeant said he was "not interested in silly talk about duels which can not possibly be fought," and called the challenge of Joaquin Martinez Saenz, former secretary of the treasury, "foolish."

Batista charged that Saenz had tried to enlist his support in a coup to overthrow President Carlos Mendieta on June 16 and 17, when the ABC society held its huge demonstration in Havana.

He said Saenz tried to carry off the coup himself after he learned that Mendieta had planned to ask for Saenz's resignation from the cabinet because of his action in connection with passage of the gold decree.

Batista said that what was widely heralded as an ABC fiesta really was the ABC's supreme effort to stage a coup to overthrow Mendieta.

This fiesta, it was recalled, culminated in a parade through the streets of Havana which was fired upon by attackers resulting in a score or more dead and wounded.

"Saenz himself came straight to me and asked me to organize a Fascist army," Batista said. "I told him to think reasonably and smoothly. I was surprised to hear such talk from people who fought against Machado, because they were suggesting a return to the same thing they sought to overthrow.

"All through Saenz's conversation it was understood that he wanted to establish a dictatorship."

There was no further comment from Saenz.

Heiress' Wedding To Clerk Revealed

Scarborough-on-Hudson, Aug. 15 (AP).—Ann Whiting, 20, heiress to a large part of the Crowell Publishing Co. fortune, eloped four months ago, it became known today, with a Minnesotan clerking in New York.

Miss Whiting, at a party last winter, first met her husband, Julian Murray, son of the late Dr. William R. Murray, who was a prominent Minneapolis physician.

They were married quietly in New York April 21—so quietly that for two months Miss Whiting's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gites Whiting, knew nothing about it. Murray's mother, Mrs. William R. Murray, did not learn of the elopement until nearly three months had gone by.

"It gets right down to throat-ease doesn't it?"

asks Warren William

[RECENT OLD GOLD CONVERT]

Dear Mr. William:—

You are right. Throat-ease IS the key to better tobacco quality. In fact, it tells you almost everything you want to know about a cigarette.

For example: If a cigarette is really free of back-bite and rasp, you know it is made of pure tobacco—without artificial flavoring. Its smoothness tells you, too, that its tobaccos are of fine quality, properly sun-ripened and aged.

As you've discovered, Mr. William, the cigarette with the greatest throat-ease likewise has the finest flavor. In the choicest tobaccos, throat-ease and taste appeal just naturally go hand in hand.

Sincerely,
P. LORILLARD COMPANY, INC.
ESTABLISHED 1760

P. S.—The gist is this, Mr. William:—
No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure. That's why Old Golds are easy on the THROAT and NERVES.

Owners Write Us . . .

Of the many La Salle owners who have written us, one says—"After taking a trip to Florida in my new La Salle, I cannot resist the temptation to drop you a line telling you what I think of the car.

"In the very first place, the thought that occurs to me is that the new La Salle once more gives to a man the pride of ownership that used to be common and later seemed to have passed from the minds of individuals, to the extent that they did not give much thought as to what kind of car they purchased—but again I say, the new La Salle gives one the feeling of pride that goes with beauty and great performance.

"I have owned many types of cars and never before have I been as pleased and happy over the ownership of an automobile as I have been and am with my new La Salle.

"You will also be pleased to learn that on my trip to Florida I averaged thirteen and seven-tenths miles per gallon of gasoline which, of course, was both gratifying and surprising."

Broaca Snaps Tigers' Streak at 14 Straight as Yanks Win, 8 to 2

PlaygroundNet Titles Won by Ritzenbergs

Nathan, Allie Each Win; Orme-McDowell Pair Girls' Victors.

RITZENBERG BROS. took a monopoly on Washington boys' playground tennis championships yesterday as Nathan, the elder, and Allie, the younger, won the city senior and junior titles, respectively, at Chevy Chase Playground.

The girls' playground doubles championship of the city went to Helen Orme and Lucille McDowell, of Burroughs, who defeated Ada Hickey and Charlotte Decker, of Janney, 6—3, 6—1, in a match much closer than the score indicates.

Nathan Wins Easily.

The older Ritzenberg, representing Cooke Playground, staged an unexpectedly easy victory over Eddie Pinkham, of Burroughs, winning, 6—2, 6—1. Pinkham, Tech High net captain, had defeated cool-headed Nathan in the semifinals of the Washington Grove Junior tournament but was no match for his victim yesterday. Nathan was seeded No. 1 and Pinkham, No. 3.

Albert, Central High's promising young player, also representing Cooke, defeated Leroy (Hop) Lomax, of Georgetown, for the junior honors, 6—3, 0—6, 6—0. Lomax, who gained the finals by upsetting several higher-ranking players, struck a flash of his giant-killing stride in the second set but it was short-lived as his smooth-stroking opponent settled down to win the final set, with concentrating his attack on Lomax's back-hand which collapsed under the pressure with a heady, volleying attack. Albert was seeded No. 2.

Nathan replaced Lou Chatelan as junior champ and his brother took the crown won last year by Melvin Dower.

Girls Get Prizes August 30.

Prizes for the winners of the girls' tournament will be awarded at the girls' city track and field meet at Central Stadium, August 30, by Miss Maude N. Parker in charge of women's and girls' playground activities.

The boys' singles and the girls' doubles have been running since July 1, and with their completion, the boys' doubles and a boys' tennis league schedule will be run off. In the doubles, each playground will be represented by its singles champion and runner-up. More than 100 youngsters will compete. The league will call into action 64 teams of five players each.

Phil Furr Off Of Hunt Club Fight Card

Flouts D. C. Boxing Body; Promoter Ahearn Seeks Sub for Aug. 20 Bout.

PHIL FURR, District welterweight champion, who sought to withdraw from a 10-round fight against Bob Wilson at the Riding and Hunt Club August 20, for which he had been signed last week, appeared before the Boxing Commission for a physical examination yesterday, was pronounced fit to fight, ordered to fight, then walked completely out of the picture in direct disobedience of the commission's ruling. Furr was accompanied by a lawyer and a doctor, but neither was allowed to appear before the commission, which confined its examination to the fighter, his manager, Harry Grove and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn.

Furr claimed he was suffering from a bad cold and also had a sprained wrist as a result of a bout several weeks ago with Frankie Petrolle. A commission doctor examined him for everything from high blood pressure to hives, then delivered the opinion that he was in fine fettle.

Ordered to Fight.

Following the examination, the commission advised Furr that he either would fight Wilson as scheduled, or would be faced with indefinite suspension. Furr pleaded for 20 minutes to consult with a third party, was granted an hour, and had not been heard from again at a late hour.

Following Furr's failure to definitely accept or reject the match, Ahearn started negotiations to secure a suitable substitute. He has under consideration Johnny Jadick of Philadelphia, Johnny Lucas of Camden, Stanislaus Laoyoza, or Roy Manley. Manley, a local lad, is the only fighter yet to face Wilson in Washington rings not to go down before his shattering left hook. He held Wilson to a sizzling draw in a recent Griffith Stadium bout.

New York Giants Due To Return to Miami

Miami Beach, Fla., Aug. 15 (AP).—The New York Giants baseball club, which did its spring training here last year, will return next spring, the city council was advised today by Bill Terry, Giants' manager.

Although there will be no guarantee this year, the city agreed in a resolution to improve conditions at Flamingo Park, where the club trains. Terry told the council in a telegram that he had approved the resolution.

Ex-Racquets King Dies.

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—Harry "Dad" Boakes, sr., 82, former racquets champion of the United States, died today. Boakes became racquets professional at the Chicago Athletic Association in 1893. Later he went to the University Club, holding his post for 25 years.

Helen Jacobs Extended in National

Mrs. Harris Victor in First Set, 7-5, but Loses, 6-2, 6-3.

Champion Dons Spiked Shoes; Babcock and Palfrey Advance.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 15 (AP).—Seven seeded stars, two from Great Britain, and one non-seeded player survived the third round of the forty-seventh women's National tennis championship today. Champion Helen Jacobs staged a courageous come-back to stave off elimination.

Comepletely outstroked and outmaneuvered in the first set, Miss Jacobs applied the pressure mercilessly in the following two sets and disposed of Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City, a former first ten luminary, 5—7, 6—2, 6—3.

With Miss Jacobs in gaining the quarter-final round were three other first ten ranking Americans, Sarah Palfrey, of Brookline, Mass.; Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, and Baroness Maude Levi, of Minden, Nev., who scored the biggest upset of the tounament yesterday when she vanquished Betty Nuthall, the former British holder of the title, in straight sets.

Dorothy Andrus Advances.

Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and the veteran Elizabeth Ryan, who was born in California, but lives in England, advanced to the round of eight along with Fredo James and Katherine Stammers, of England.

A combination of neuritis in her left ankle and trouble gaining a foothold on the slippery turf almost ended Miss Jacobs' two-year reign. Answering the champion's famous chop shots with effective cross-court volleys, Mrs. Harris worked up a lead of 5-3 in games in the first set. Helen won the next two games to draw level and then halted play while she removed her rubber-soled shoes and continued the set in her stocking feet.

This didn't help and she lost the eleventh and twelfth games to drop the set. Miss Jacobs then went into a huddle with tournament officials and with the consent of Mrs. Harris donned spiked shoes.

Apparently that was what she needed for she had the play all her own way in the second set and was making a merry runaway of the final chapter until the sixth game.

Mrs. Harris Rallies.

At this juncture Mrs. Harris managed to win her own service for the first time in the set and then proceeded to break the champion's delivery in the seventh game, doing it almost at love save for a volley placement that just nicked the forecourt sideline. Mrs. Harris won the eighth game on service and then gave the champion plenty of anxious moments in the final game.

With the game score at 40-30 and match point in sight, Queen Helen netted one of Mrs. Harris' soft returns and then was handed the match when the Missourian tossed away easy chances for the next two points.

Miss Jacobs' opponent tomorrow will be Miss Ryan, who despite

The Greatest Tiger of Them All Returns to the Lair

Ty Cobb, in the East after a long sojourn in California, beams his joy on the new generation of ball players who are driving toward what would be Detroit's first pennant since 1909 when Cobb was the most dashing and most feared ball player of them all. Tribe and Nats In Twin Bill Today

Weaver and Whitehill Due to Oppose Hildebrand and Hudlin on Hill.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

IT IS PURELY a coincidence that Detroit's lead on the Yankees is 5½ games while just a year ago today Washington enjoyed a similar advantage over the same club. It is merely another coincidence that Detroit has just hung up the year's longest winning streak—14 games, while this time a year ago the Nats were in the midst of a spurt that won 13 straight before being snapped by Detroit.

'Frisco Joe Cronin reminded us of all this yesterday as he sat on a trunk in the locker room while the rain flung itself down and washed out the game between Cleveland and Washington.

Wait Until 1935.

I suspect that it must be rather painful to 'Frisco to recall all this—to be fighting his way out of the second division mire, and none too successfully, while another club steals the act the kid manager's team staged a year ago. But if it is, he never betrays it. Cronin still is imbued with the enthusiasm and optimism, though to a lesser degree, that marked his efforts in 1933.

"We're out of it," he remarked, "We're trying to keep our head above water right now, but listen, if you want to write something that'll put a star in your crown just mark it down that we'll be back up there next year." He neglected to say just who's gonna put that star in my crown. The boss, maybe.

Yesterday's rain was beneficial to the team inasmuch as Heine Manush's leg injury is just as bad as it was out West when he had to retire from active duty. Linke, too, is suffering from a sore arm and will be under Mike Martin's care for a few days.

Moonface was to have pitched yesterday, but Cronin shifted to Weaver when he found Linke's arm bad. So today it will be Bob Burke and Earl Whitehill, with Burke in the opener. The first game, incidentally, gets under way at 1:15 instead of the usual 1:30.

The Nat batters will face Will Hudlin and Oral Hildebrand, two lads who disagree violently with their batting appetites. Hildebrand, however, did not last against Washington on the last road trip, but was kayoed midway in the game.

Though Detroit's winning race has fandom sitting on edge, the ball players are watching Cleveland's stretch run with an eye on 1935. Word has gone around that the Indians will be the tough one next season.

$25,000 Trot Race Won by Lord Jim

GOSHEN, N. Y., Aug. 15 (AP).—Lord Jim, one of the last of the Guy Axworthy colts which brought only $575 as a yearling, paid E. L. Mefford, of Columbus, Ohio, big dividends today when he whipped eight speedy 3-year-old trotters over the good-time track in the eighth renewal of the $25,000 Hambletonian, richest of light harness racing stakes.

With the race forced into four heats for the second time in its history, Lord Jim proved a worthy son of a great sire as he came back to take the final and deciding mile in a gruelling test with the two other heat winners after showing the way home in the second test.

Muscletone, flying the colors of C. B. Shaffer's Cold Stream Stud, of Lexington, victor in the third heat, took second money, and Princess Peg, the little filly from the Lyle Brothers Stable of Plainfield, N. J., third after showing the way home in the first mile over the triangular track.

The triumph was doubly sweet for Hugh Parshall, of Urbana, Ohio, the sport's leading driver for the last seven years. He not only trained both Lord Jim and Muscletone but guided the former to victory, beating out his younger brother, Daryl, who handled Muscletone's reins. Sep Palin, Indian-

Homers Help A's Beat Chisox Twice

Philadelphia, Aug. 15 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics ran a winning streak to five straight by taking a double-header from the Chicago White Sox today.

The Mackmen won the first game, 7 to 4, and came back behind Bill Dietrich's pitching to take the night-cap, 2 to 1.

Foxx's thirty-seventh home run of the season, climaxing a four-run rally in the seventh inning and coming with two on base, gave the Athletics the opening encounter.

Shields Quits Singles at Newport

Blames Leg Injury but Plays Doubles; Stoefen and Lott Advance.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 15 (AP).—A bombshell in the form of the default of the defending champion, Francis X. Shields, today stunned the Newport Casino tennis field into comparable idleness.

News of the withdrawal of the country's first ranking player cast such a blight on the program that only three singles matches and 12 doubles competitions were decided.

Shields' default was due to a leg injury, suffered in England and aggravated on shipboard. However, it did not prevent him from keeping his doubles engagement. J. Gilbert Hall, of New York, the only unseeded player remaining in the quest for the singles title, slipped into the quarter-finals round by the default. There he will meet Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J.

Tigers No Team Of Destiny—Cochrane

Simply "Best Team in Baseball," Detroit Pilot Declares.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers are no "team of destiny," Manager Mickey Cochrane insists, but simply the "best team" in baseball."

Neither is he to be regarded by any means as a "miracle man," Cochrane adds, merely because in his first year as manager he has driven them within sight of Detroit's first American League pennant in 25 years.

"There's absolutely no mystery or secret about the fact we have grabbed ourselves a big lead," Cochrane said today in a discussion of the situation, which he amplified later in his radio debut over a National network. "We are out in front because we have the best team in baseball.

"This club is hitting at a .310 clip,

Crosetti Gets Homer in Third; 15,000 Watch Third Battle.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15 (AP).—The New York Yankees got up off the floor today, after their double knock-down, and broke the winning streak of the pennant-mad Detroit Tigers in the third game of their fight for American League baseball supremacy.

Delivering a succession of counterblows that blasted Tommy Bridges off the pitching peak in five innings, the Yankees rallied behind the effective pitching of the young Yale graduate, Johnny Broaca, to score an 8-2 decision and serve notice that they are not entirely to be counted out of the pennant battle.

The Tigers were stopped after winning 14 consecutive games. They had equalled the best mark for successive triumphs ever made by a Detroit team, the 1909 champions of Hughey Jennings.

Lead Cut to 5½ Games.

Manager Mickey Cochrane and his fiery crew remained five and one-half games in front of the Yankees, with two more games to be played with New York.

Today's defeat was the first setback for the Tigers since they dropped the opening game of a double-header to Cleveland on July 31. During their spectacular streak, which rapidly widened the gap separating them from the second-place Yankees, Detroit won six games from Cleveland, three from Chicago, three from St Louis and two from New York in yesterday's double-header. It was the longest winning streak for an American League club since the Browns made it 14 in a row in 1916.

15,000 See Battle.

The Yankees did a thorough and workman-like job of halting the Tiger rush for the time being under circumstances that were altogether uninspiring by comparison with yesterday. Where the stands had been jammed the day before with a howling crowd of nearly 80,000, barely 15,000 braved the cloudy

The Deans Await SOS Call in Vain

Cardinals Deduct Cost of Ripped Uniforms in Pay Envelope.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 15 (AP).—The fined and suspended Dean brothers, Dizzy and Paul, stood by tonight for an SOS from the Cardinals.

Instead of departing on an announced fishing trip to Florida, Dizzy and Paul remained in St. Louis, confident the Cardinals can not get along without them for long.

But Sam Breadon, club president, insisted he would have no honeyed words for the brilliant young pitchers.

"The next move is up to the Deans," Breadon insisted, adding that he would stand squarely behind Manager Frankie Frisch and make no advances to the "rebels."

The brothers went to the Cardinal office today for their semi-monthly pay checks. Dizzy received another shock when he found he also had been penalized $36 as the cost of two uniforms he is said to have destroyed yesterday when Manager Frisch informed him he had been fined $100 and suspended.

"I don't think that was nice," Dizzy said. "I was mad and lost my temper when I tore the uniforms, but they weren't destroyed. They could have been mended."

The fines resulted from the failure of the Deans to accompany the Cardinals to Detroit for an exhibition game Monday and the suspensions followed a row with Frisch when the manager told them of the fines.

Club officials have announced that the pitchers can return to active duty whenever they are ready to accept club rules and discipline, but that the fines will stand.

Teralice Captures Feature at Narragansett Park in Three-Horse Blanket Finish

MoneyHorses Noses Apart At End

My Dandy Second, With Cutie Face Third in Race Thriller.

NARRAGANSETT PARK, Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 15 (AP).—In one of the closest finishes of the meeting, Teralice, 4-year-old bay colt, carrying the silks of Pike & Unna, won the Treasure Island Handicap, a 6-furlong dash for 3-year-olds and up, today.

Only a nose separated Teralice from W. C. Reichert's My Dandy at the finish, and My Dandy, in turn, led F. A. Griffith's Cutie Face by only another nose.

Teralice was held off the early pace, but moved up steadily leaving the back stretch, was up in the closing stride to win. My Dandy assumed a slight lead in the stretch, held on grimly under punishment; and just failed to last, but saved the place from the fast-closing Cutie Face.

Teralice was clocked in 1:13 flat for the distance and paid $10.60 for $2 straight.

Hindu Queen Wins.

Saratoga Springs, Aug. 15 (AP).—Morton L. Schwartz's Hindu Queen, a brown daughter of Sickle-Maharanee that graduated from the maiden ranks here in her last start, showed unexpected quality when she won the fifty-fourth running of the Alabama Stakes, oldest three-year-old filly fixture in the country, here today. With a 10-pound pull in the weights, Max Hirsch's charge led home E. R. Bradley's Bazaar, the 1-to-2 choice, by a length to win $11,050 in prize money for her New York owner. William Woodward's Fleam was a poor third, five lengths away.

Mrs. W. Plunkett Stewart's Lady Reigh, which earned $11,600 when she captured the Coaching Club American Oaks at Belmont, was a well-trounced fourth, with C. V. Whitney's Elf Lock fifth and last. Hindu Queen closed at 9 to 2 and ran the mile and a quarter in 2:05.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Narragansett, Aug. 15.

Dear Al:

Talk about the drought, I haven't had a winner since Clocker Mike returned from the pest house. Yesterday he arrived in time to put the breaks on me after I had squeezed home three winners. Today he was around throughout the card and my horses ran as if they were dragging anchor. I'll have to admit Mike was trying, which is more than some of our nags were doing. He did everything to change my luck. After the first two failed, he went over in the infield. He tried the far turn, the rail and then came up in the press box, but still no winner. When the horses went to the post for the last race, I made him sit with his back to the track and his hat pulled down over his eyes, but somehow that poison leaked out. We were not even close. It looks as if I'll have to get rid of Mike at the next paddock sale.

BILL.

First race—Colorist appears to have found a spot for graduation purposes. With Burke to do the riding, I'm expecting to start the day with a winner. Radiator has had a lot of education and is ripe for a real race. Blind Praise to take care of the others.

Second race—Traffic Judge has had his ancient legs groomed for a sprint of this kind. Has an inside post position and may be hustled to the top, where he should say. Liqueur will draw the bulk of the play, and will be ready if the top one makes mistakes. Cash Surrender for the show.

Third race—Douglas F. has the edge on these platers. My good thing, Wilrob, makes another start, but I don't believe he can handle the top fellow. Flaghorn is dangerous at a price. Might take it all.

Fourth race—Dustina seems well suited here. Gets in with only a steadying impost and has the rail position. Zorana and St. Stephens will be ready if the top pair make any mistakes.

Fifth race—Carry Over is the chalk horse of this test and will be deserving of every nickel put through the machines. Knight of Old raced impressively here the other day and should be second. Rhadamanthus for the minor award.

Sixth race—Clocker Mike tries his first special in more than two weeks and he certainly goes in for price. He has come forward with Boy Crazy to upset Polly Cee and Cold Spill and says nothing less than a $15 mutuel will satisfy him.

Seventh race—Burning Up, Bylona and Old Judge is the way I fancy them in this contest. The three of them fit rather snugly.

Hot Mat Tussle Is Promised Tonight

Szabo-Garibaldi Feature Likely to Be Rough and Tumble Affair.

WITH Gino Garibaldi squawking about Bennie Bortnick and demanding another referee, and with Sandor Szabo declaring that he is out to pay off the Italian for having given him a cauliflowered ear, the bout between this pair in tonight's rasslefest feature at Griffith Stadium has the cash customers smacking their lips in anticipation.

All of these advance moans and groans probably are so much hooey, as are many of those heard and seen in the ring, but the fact remains that the dope indicates a worthwhile match. Szabo, a matinee-idol type in appearance, is quite a rassler—a smooth-working, smart lad who can stand the gaff. Against Garibaldi, he will have to take plenty of punishment, for the Italian's thorhammer carries a real punch, and the big question is whether he can take what Garibaldi hands him in the way of roughness and still have enough left to come on and win.

Both First-Fighters.

Both rasslers are rated among the first-fighters, but they failed to get near enough to title heights to have any claims to the many mat crowns laying around when they were younger, and now are rated in the trial-horse class. Szabo made quite a hit here against Ed (Don) George at the last local show and most of those who saw the brawl thought that the Hungarian lad had been waved out of the picture via the quick count route. He appears to be on the build-up here and, while he lost little prestige in losing the George match, his drawing powers here will be materially lessened if he fails to take Garibaldi tonight.

Dick Shikat, former title claimant, who has been broadcasting to the world that he is getting sick and tired playing second and third fiddle on mat programs and that he will have to have a few headline spots given him—or else.

May Be Bad for Fields.

If Shikat is serious in his complaint, young Harry Fields, former Penn athlete whom he meets in the semifinals, is due to be torn down following quite a local build-up.

Father Lumpkin, former Georgia Tech gridman, makes his debut in one of the preliminaries, meeting the now whiskerless Vanke Selesniak, with mix-ups between Charley (Pretty Boy) Allen and Bert Rubi, and between Joe Davito and Henry Piers rounding out the card.

Mata Hari Is Beaten In Feature at Detroit

Detroit, Aug. 15 (AP).—Mata Hari, the sprinting filly from the stable of Charles T. Fisher, proved an unsuccessful mudder today and finished third to Marooned and Rock X in the $1,200 Dearborn Handicap, run as the sixth race at the Detroit Fairgrounds track.

A 3-to-10 favorite to win in the pari mutuels, Mata Hari broke on top, from outside the stalls, but thereafter never was better than second. Marooned, wearing the silks of the Lemar Stock Farm, led from the quarter pole, just outlasting a final challenge by Rock X to win by a nose. The race was at six furlongs and run over a sloppy track in 1:12 3-5.

Marooned rewarded holders of win tickets with $28, while Mata Hari, in spite of the prohibitive win odds, paid $3 to show.

City Slickers Slicked at Goshen

Consarned Trot Races No Place for Broadway Guys, Says Gallico.

By Paul Gallico.

GOOD TIME TRACK, Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—The Hambletonian, the Kentucky Derby of the trotting circuits, is less furtive than it was last year. The bookmakers operate their little clubs out in the open, on the lawn in the clubhouse and in the bull pen back of the bleachers.

Last year the boys used to take you under the grand stand or back of the fence to slug you, a procedure which was quite in keeping with highway robbery practiced by the simple reubens on the city slickers who journeyed up to this innocent rural community to indulge in an educational afternoon.

They used to have to treat the police force for vertigo at the end of the day, an ailment contracted from turning their backs. The illicit books were pretty well scattered around the grounds, behind trees, empty ginger ale cases and refreshment booths and the constables used to have to spin pretty fast some times.

Today the betting is conducted in an orderly and dignified manner with each club, such as the Pimlico Club or Malta Club, operating a little out-door office, neatly raised and fenced in, with a clerk and cashier inside, a slate on a stand on the outside and an odds caller and ticket seller standing by the slate. Wagers are accepted in front, payoffs occur at the back. There is no confusion. It is easy to make a bet or collect a wager. The regular New York tracks might look Goshen over and learn a good deal about how to conduct open betting.

The odds are supposed to be more lenient toward the suckers this year, but 6 to 1 is still the best you can get in a ten-horse race. I do not write this in a carping spirit, because I do not bet the trotters. I am strictly a reporter at these rural parties, and the extent of my plunging is to buy a pack of 13-cent cigarettes for 25 cents at the church booth to help along the new organ, or steeple, or whatever they are going to buy with the profits.

A gentleman from Broadway just passed by the press warren and said with a sigh—"whew! I have gotten away from a hundred dollars quicker than you could say boo! Bettin' the trotters! I am a wise guy. A Wise Guy!"

I have seen two types of wherry, sulky, buckboard or buggy or whatever you call the little go-carts tacked on to the rear end of the trotters. One rides always behind the horse, like the old-time catchers used to stand, a couple of feet back of the plate and take them on first bounce. The other is hitched right up close, so the driver can braid his whiskers in the horse's tail and go to town.

The little shays are woven out of spider webs and look as fragile. The drivers sit in them with their legs spread apart. In wrestling this is known as a leg-spread and when Jimmy Londos gets into one he goes "Oooooh, ah, oh, acha," but it doesn't seem to bother the very wiry and ancient gentlemen who drive them. A lot of these grand old pilots look as though they couldn't walk more than a quarter of a furlong but they can certainly ride those tails around the mile track. They can drive 'em when they're 75, and do.

Bookies Delighted.

There were some 30,000 jammed into Good Time Park when Princess Peg won the first heat of the Hambletonian much to the surprise of all and the delight of the books who were up to their ears in an animal named Emily Stokes, who was a heavy favorite.

As I write this, the second heat of the $25,845.44 stake has been run and Miss Stokes has yet to stick her puss into anything that looks like money. The second scramble was captured by Lord Jim, a 3-to-1 shot, and the betting booths were still surrounded by parties waving cash funds as the ponies wheeled by the start for the "off."

The character of the crowd seems to have changed over a year. Less hayseed and more Broadway. The word has gone around that there is a new way to get trimmed just a couple of hours upstate and the regular clients are flocking. They figure a change does everyone good.

Roman Soldier Shows Way at Hawthorne

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—Roman Soldier was heralded as the champion 2-year-old racer at the Hawthorne meeting today.

In the feature event at six furlongs, Roman Soldier, racing for Max Hirsch, of New York, and trained by his son, W. J. Hirsch, galloped to an easy victory over a sloppy track.

Ridden by Jockey Richard, Roman Soldier took command at the head of the stretch and took down the purse by six lengths.

Betting Out in Open, but 6-1 Is Best Odds in 10-Horse Field.

DIXIE PRINCESS, hustled to the front in the opening furlong, drew clear rounding the far turn and, hard ridden at the end, held COONEY safe. The latter, unruly at the post, was away fast, made a determined effort to reach the leader and, though gaining fast at the end, was unable to be up in time. PANTOUFLE moved up on the inside in the last quarter mile and held on gamely through the stretch run. SWEET MOLLIE, shuffled back soon after the start, moved up steadily and, taken to the outside, closed stoutly in the last three-sixteenths. WAR PROFITS, prominently placed, weakened after going slightly more than three furlongs. MISS CYLLENE was unable to reach the leaders and weakened badly through the stretch.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:01½. Off at 3:02. Winner, J. D. AYSTON, moved up fast on the inside, went to the front in the first furlong, drew clear and rated along in advance of his field, was never menaced. STRENUOUS, away fast, was permitted to drop back and, rated along within striking distance of the leaders, came to the outside for the closing test, were down. OLD BALDY, but was unable to reach the leader. OLD BALDY, prominently placed throughout, held on gamely to the finish. FRED ALMY raced wide for the first half mile while pressing the leader closest, but weakened in the stretch run. BARCELONA PETE was going gamely at the end after being outrun early. INSTIGATOR never gained a prominent position, though kept under intermittent punishment.

THIRD RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:32½. Off at 3:34½. Winner, G. L. Arvin's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUCK IN, $8.50, $4.40, $3.80; LAWLESS LADY, $5.70, $4.70; NANCY C., $11.50.

LUCK IN took command in the run to the first turn, opened up a daylight advantage, was rated along in front, but had to be briskly ridden at the end to hold off LAWLESS LADY. The latter restrained while holding a prominent position, saved ground in the stretch, closed stoutly and was overtaking the winner at every stride at the finish. NANCY C., well placed throughout, continued with good energy to the finish. RETRIBUTION moved up steadily after passing the five-furlong pole and, on the outside and though placed under urging, was unable to reach the leaders. BLUE FOAM, away fast, dropped back and lacked any of her accustomed speed. INFILEX was outrun. ERECH, placed under punishment after rounding the far turn, dropped back steadily.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:06½. Off at 4:14. Winner, C. V. Whitney's lt. b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WILD PIGEON, $3.70, $2.90, $2.80; PROSECUTOR, $3.10, $3.30; MAD BULL, $4.10.

WILD PIGEON, unruly at the post and taken outside the stalls, showed speed from the outset, shook off PROSECUTOR midway of the turn and drew out steadily thereafter. PROSECUTOR had good speed, made a determined effort to keep pace with the winner, but gave way steadily in the last five-sixteenths. MAD BULL, moved up steadily and, benefited by a fast saving of ground at the stretch turn, closed gamely and would probably have been second in another stride. HARDWARE, outpaced early, finished with a belated rush through the stretch. SAND CLOUD dropped back steadily after breaking alertly. He closed stoutly in the last furlong. JOHN GILPIN went well placed for the first three furlongs, but dropped back badly through the stretch. GAY BLADE had brief early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Treasure Island Handicap (cup presented by owner by Mastro-Goldwyn). For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TERALICE, $10.60, $5.70, $4.70; MY DANDY, $53.50, $16.50; CUTIE FACE, $5.40.

TERALICE was not hurried during the opening stages and trailed for the opening quarter mile, moved up steadily leaving the back stretch and, closing with a rush in the stretch, was up in the closing stride. MY DANDY, away fast, was taken under slight restraint, assumed a slight lead in the stretch, held on tenaciously under punishment and just failed to last. CUTIE FACE, close up, finished with good energy in the stretch drive. CAN'T REMEMBER had good speed, drew clear midway of the turn, but weakened slightly in the final drive. HIGH OLEE, in close quarters leaving the back stretch, came to the outside in the stretch and showed a belated rush. ALL FORLORN was unable to keep pace under pressure. GOLD STEP was never a factor. EZEKIEL had good early speed, but faltered badly in the closing quarter mile. GIFT OF ROSES was unable to enter into serious contention and tired through the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $2,500. The Fort Adams Claiming Stakes. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:13¼. Off at 5:14½. Winner, A. A. SPEEDY SKIPPY, in nearest attendance of the pace, wore down GAILLARDIA inside the last furlong and drew out steadily to the finish. FLYING CADET improved his position steadily and closed with a rush in the closing furlong. BIG BEAU, slow to settle into his best stride and outrun for the first half mile, began to move up after rounding the far turn, and obtaining clear sailing on the inside, was taken to the outside in the stretch and closed with a belated burst of speed. GAILLARDIA drew clear straightening out on the back stretch, continued to make the running, but weakened in the last furlong. PIETY loomed up threateningly nearing the stretch, but was unable to improve her position in the closing drive. VICAR, well placed from the beginning, was unable to improve his position when placed under urging. KHORASAN, a trailer early, made up some ground in the last quarter mile. KHAMSEEN was outrun.

UKRAINE, steadied along under slight restraint for the first half mile, began moving up gradually thereafter and, hard ridden through the stretch, outlasted DEVICE at the finish. The latter forced the pace of ERVAST, assumed a brief lead in the stretch and fought it out courageously to the end, though unable to withstand the strong finish through the stretch of UKRAINE. GAY PARTY came with the stretch runners, R. went prominently placed throughout, but faltered in the closing quarter mile. ERVAST had good speed in pace making, but tired in the last three-sixteenths. FAIR BILLY made up some ground, though never able to enter into serious contention. LIGHT BREEZE closed some ground. DOORKEEPER, forced to take up going to the first turn, was never able to recover and raced far back all the way.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 6:16½. Off at 6:20½. Winner, Jersey Stable's br. g. BRASS MONKEY, as usual slow to begin, began moving up nearing the half-mile ground, moved stoutly, assumed command before reaching the stretch and drew out steadily in the stretch run. GABBO took command in the run to the first turn, was steadied along in front, dropped back when passed by the winner, but came again to the wire well down. SCOTCH SOLDIER, the latter, in close quarters after rounding the far turn, was brought to the outside leaving the back stretch, moved up stoutly, but weakened in the last 70 yards. BRIGHT CHANCE went to the front, straightened out on the back stretch, but faltered in the last three furlongs. GARLIC trailed far back throughout.

Jefferson and Church Hill Winners

Beat Brunswick, Harmony, Respectively, in Tri-County League.

JEFFERSON, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Jefferson nosed out Brunswick in the Tri-County League in a good game, 4 to 3. Ambrose held the Railroaders to eight scattered hits and struck out seven. Jefferson got its first run in the third inning on two singles and added two in the fifth. Two singles and an infield out enabled Jefferson to score the winning run in the seventh inning.

Brunswick evened the count in the fourth frame. With two runs across and two on base and none out in the ninth inning, Ambrose settled down, struck out the next batter and forced the next two to roll out.

British Make Yacht 6-5 Betting Choice

New York, Aug. 15 (Spl.).—British sportsmen are so confident their entry, Endeavour, in the International Cup races, will defeat the American defender, they are willing to back their judgment at the odds of 6 to 5, with Endeavour the favorite, according to representatives of an English syndicate here to handle the financial end of the forthcoming yachting event on September 15.

Substantial sums backing the Endeavour at these odds have been placed with Robert Darnell Co., commission brokers, according to members of the commission firm, who already have "covered" $5,000 American money at these odds. This sum was wagered by a veteran New York yachtsman.

Squad of 150 Plebes Reports For Navy Football Practice

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—More than 150 members of the plebe or freshman class at the Naval Academy responded to the first call for football practice today and were put through the first rudiments, including calisthenics, general instructions, some blocking by the linemen, passing and handling the ball generally. Daily sessions will be held from now on, the varsity squad of over 80, now on vacation, reporting September 5.

Today's inaugural was under the general direction of Lieut. Tom Hamilton, new head coach, and all of his assistants, of whom there are 11, all former Navy stars except two, were on the job. Weeding out of the plebes will begin as early as possible.

40 to Make Up Squad.

A squad of about 40 will be retained for the regular freshman squad, the others being segregated to the class and company groups.

Lieut. Harry Hardwick, who, like Hamilton, was a member of the National championship eleven in 1926, will be head coach of the Plebes, replacing the veteran Johnny Wilson, who has been moved up to the post of assistant varsity backfield mentor. Hardwick will have as his assistants Lieut. Joe Tschirgi, back; Ensign Lou Bryan, tackle, and Lieut. Oscar Hagberg, lineman and back.

Edgar E. (Rip) Miller, of Notre Dame, head coach at Navy for the last three years, who will be chief line coach of varsity material, directed that phase of work with the Plebes today. The rest of the staff of varsity mentors include Lieut. Johnny Cross and Arthur Bornan, linemen; MacGrudder, Tuttle, center; "Bullet" Lou Kira, and Howard Caldwell, back.

Lynch Outstanding.

Perhaps the outstanding youngster among the Plebe material is Frank C. Lynch, who carries 215 pounds on his towering frame of 6 feet 3 inches. Lynch played tackle on the freshman of Kansas University and is said to have real class. Although the coaches have not passed on the new recruits, among other experienced lads may be mentioned Sabola, a tackle from Iowa, and Sullivan, an Annapolis boy, who prepped at Severn School.

18,000 Watch Giants, Bucs Split Bill

League Leaders' Homers Win First, 5-4; Hoyt Triumphs, 4-3.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 15 (AP).—The Giants and the Pirates defied the elements for nearly 2 hours today in their efforts to play a double-header, and finally broke even.

The league leading New Yorkers won the first game, 5 to 4, on the strength of a 4-run rally in the first inning, which was subjected to the long delay because of a thunderstorm. Pittsburgh rallied to take the second, 4 to 3, as Waite Hoyt outpitched Hal Schumacher to gain his third victory in four days.

A crowd of 18,000 hung around through the storm and while the field was being dried by burning gasoline on the base paths.

Scrivener Fans 11 in Six Innings to Win Out by 9-to-1 Score.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—The Athletics, local Valley League team, outclassed Woodstock here today, winning by a score of 9 to 1. The only run made by the visitors was a circuit blow in the ninth by Forsythe, far over the center-field fence. Archie Scrivener, former George Washington University southpaw, was in rare form, fanning 11 in 6 innings. Lowery, who finished the game, yielded but one hit.

The locals went on a hitting spree in the second frame and registered seven runs. Featuring the attack were triples by Scrivener and Taylor. The former's smash came with the bases loaded, while Taylor's drive sent two runners home. Woodstock fielded sharply throughout, completing two fast double plays.

The Athletics journey to Harrisonburg Sunday, while their next home game will be with Culpeper here next Wednesday.

The Post Sandlotter

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE has an opportunity to cop the second-series pennant in the Departmental League tomorrow in the finale of the regular season's schedule. If successful, the G. P. O. nine will meet Investigation in a play-off series, best two out of three, for the Post Association championship in this loop. Investigation and Union Printers clash today in the resumption of league competition after almost a week's respite.

Heurich Brewers and Pig 'n' Whistle, challengers for the Post Association championship in the Industrial League, resume their feud today in the second game of the titular series on the West Ellipse at 5 o'clock. The Brewers won the first battle by an 8-0 score. Adger Adair or Frank Watt will toss 'em up for the Pigs. Manager Bill Flester has not definitely decided upon his pitching selection, but it is not unlikely that he will send Reggie Brown, hero of the first game, to the mound again today in an effort to make a clean sweep.

The Virginia White Sox will encounter the Clarendon Cardinals in Sunday's baseball attraction on Baileys Crossroads diamond.

The Tiger A. C., of Marbury, Md., is anxious to schedule Saturday games on its home field with local teams. Manager Sullivan of the Tiger nine can be phoned at Indianhead 324 between 9 and 3 o'clock.

Northwestern A. C. seeks a game for Sunday with an unlimited team. Call Manager Fowble at Columbia 1298.

Brinkley's nine will engage the Lorton team Sunday at 3 o'clock on the Lorton diamond.

Plans for The Post Association interleague series within the next ten days will be formulated tonight at a meeting of the presidents of the several week-day leagues. Vic Gauzza, Bill Flester, George Link, Walter Shomo, Forrest Burgess, Burt Shipley and Thomas Mullenberg are requested to be present.

15% to 20% More Smooth Power Shown in Auto Test

You know what the Leaning Tower of Pisa looks like, if you've ever opened a school geography. This marble bell tower built in the Middle Ages at Pisa, Italy, weighs 15,967 tons. A weight not to be lifted except by tremendous power! And yet, one gallon of the powerful new Sinclair H-C Gasoline could lift Pisa's famous tower 3 1/10 feet—if all H-C's energy could be fully utilized.

In a recent road test, where the new H-C was tried out against 12 other well-known gasolines, the results were as follows: The new H-C gave from 15% to 20% more smooth power. It also accelerated from 15% to 20% quicker than the other gasolines and gave from 1 to 3 more miles per gallon!

Try the new H-C Gasoline for 30 days in your car. And ask the Sinclair dealer for a folder which fully explains how one gallon of the new H-C could lift the Tower of Pisa.

With Season Only Three Weeks Old, United Artists Has Third of Product Ready

Release Charts Show Firm Off To Fast Start

Zanuck, Schenck Return; More About 'Drunkard;' About the Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

With the new screen season, presumed by many to begin somewhere in the general vicinity of August 1, not yet three weeks old, United Artists beats the barrier by having eight of its 24 productions ready for release.

From the studios of Twentieth Century Pictures, Samuel Goldwyn, Reliance Pictures, Viking Productions and London Films, all releasing through United Artists, it is revealed that many spools of celluloid have passed their final stages of editing and cutting.

"Bulldog Drummond Strikes Back," starring Ronald Colman, already seen in the Capital, and "The Affairs of Cellini," with Frederic March and Constance Bennett starred, head the list for Twentieth Century. "The Last Gentleman," George Arliss' next picture, is completed and ready for distribution.

Anna Sten's Next.

"We Live Again," Samuel Goldwyn's screen version of Tolstoi's "Resurrection," with Anna Sten and Frederic March in the costellar roles, has just left the cutting room. The finished print of Douglas Fairbanks' London Films production, "The Private Life of Don Juan," it is expected, will arrive soon from England. That would be Douglas Fairbanks, pere.

The first print of the Reliance film, "The Count of Monte Cristo," made years ago as a silent picture by Fox, with John Gilbert, Estelle Taylor and the late George Siegman importantly cast, is on its way to New York from the West Coast, and "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round," the musical drama from the same studio, will follow shortly, if present luck holds.

Viking Productions is represented on the U. A. distribution schedule by "Our Daily Bread," King Vidor's latest, awaiting release.

"Big Shots" Return.

Speaking of Twentieth Century, Doug Fairbanks, sr., etcetera, as we certainly have been—especially the etcetera—Darryl F. Zanuck, production head of Twentieth Century, who has been spending the last four months chasing the big game around the African veldt and authors, producers and directors around London, returned to America yesterday aboard the S. S. Rex—provided the S. S. Rex made port yesterday according to schedule. He is accompanying Joseph M. Schenck, president of both Twentieth Century and United Artists, and Douglas Fairbanks, the elder, on the crossing.

With Mr. Zanuck are W. P. Lipscombe and R. J. Minney, authors of "Clive of India," a London stage success. The writers will proceed by easy stages, train, plane and possibly bus, to Hollywood, where they will begin work—and maybe finish it, as well—on the screen transcription of their play, which is to be produced, you guessed it, by Twentieth Century.

Mitzi Mayfair, the Ziegfeld dancing star and former partner of Hal LeRoy, will be seen in person on the stage of the Earle Theater for the week beginning a week from tomorrow, August 24. Mitzi will be seen in a number of her distinctively individual dances with the Twelve Aristocrats. The Earle also boasts that it has obtained a prerelease—although for what date it is not made clear—of S. S. Van Dine's newest mystery-thriller, "The Dragon Murder Case," which brings to the screen a new Philo Vance in the person of Warren William. Advance reports have it that the versatile Mr. William discloses a peculiar facility for the interpretation of the celebrated deductionist, surpassing in his conception of the erudite private detective such distinguished predecessors as William Powell and Basil Rathbone. That will be plenty good enough.

"Town Hall Tonight."

Tonight, and again on Saturday night of this week, at 8:45 o'clock, atop the Willard Hotel, Rebecca Tarwater, billed as "The Tennessee Nightingale," and the other diverting "olio" singers and recitationists, will be seen and heard between the acts of the late P. T. Barnum's ancient melodrama, "The Drunkard, or the Fallen Saved," which on Tuesday night romped its way to instant success with a cast of players that includes Elizabeth Gatlin Pritchard, who also directed the production; John Lloyd Sikken, Anne Ives, M. Forney Reese, Isham Keith, jr., John Shellie, Maurice Jarvis, Andrew Dent, jr., Ethel Hayden and numerous others.

While the olio numbers are a highlight of the performance—what with Miss Tarwater's "Come, Josephine, in My Flying Machine," and "She's Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage" and Isham Keiths "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," and the rest—there is quite as much fun to be derived from the various "punch lines" appended to the speeches of the various leads. For instance, these:

Lines What Are Lines!

"And however wild a youth may be when abroad among his associates, no gentleman ever insulted a friendless and unprotected woman."

"Ah, little did I think when I thought of selling that dear old cottage that it should be regarded as a casket invaluable for the jewel it contained." Meaning, of course, the gal.

"Drunk, fighting—my wife, my child. Oh, agony! Agony!"

"Nay, friend, take not your life, but mend it."

"A villain I have lived, a villain let me die!"

Those are lines, what I mean. Delivered with the exaggerated mouthing of the barnstormers of almost a century ago and the interpretative gestures of the same period, they are devastating, no less.

"Whistling Prohibited."

Incidentally, it is greatly to the credit of the cast's composure and powers of concentration that they did not go completely up in their lines at the premiere performance Tuesday night.

That audience was almost too hilarious to handle, frequently drowning the players' voices with its own clamorous admonitions. But that was supposed to be part of the fun. It is a part, nevertheless, that can be carried to uncomfortable extremes.

The newly established Tavern Club, to be open adjoining the "Barnum Music Hall" on the tenth floor of the Willard on the three nights a week when "The Drunkard" is presented, is decorated with some rare old playbills, photographs, posters and the like, which Managing Director Harry P. Somerville has had the good judgment to hang out of reach of the inveterate souvenir hunters. Some of these mementos of an earlier day in the theater are of considerable intrinsic value and Mr. Somerville wisely has provided against any of them being snitched. They might be perfectly safe during the early part of the evening, but by a quarter to 2 Wednesday morning a crowd that had been total strangers an hour before were dancing Paul Joneses to "Si" Slaughter's music. Which just goes to show!

A Nice Line-Up.

RKO-Keith's, which tomorrow gets back on an even keel in the matter of opening its new bills on Friday—probably for no more than one consecutive week, but even that is something—has an imposing list of attractions lined up for the early fall trade.

Following the engagement of "Jane Eyre," the picturization of the Charlotte Bronte novel opening tomorrow, the Fifteenth street house will offer Leslie Howard in "The Lady Is Willing;" Ann Harding in "The Fountain"; Ricardo Cortez in "Hat, Coat and Glove;" Irene Dunne and John Boles in "The Age of Innocence;" Down to Their Last Yacht," Radio Pictures' second musical production by those responsible for "Flying Down to Rio;" "The Gay Divorcee," with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, who danced that stunning "Carioca" in "Flying Down to Rio," and thus gave birth to a vogue that has as yet revealed nosigns of recession, and Katharine Hepburn in "The Little Minister."

Eight promising weeks, those, if these ageing senses have not grown faultier than I think.

It is with the greatest chagrin that I realize an inexcusable remissness in having omitted from my mention of the musical treats afforded at the Monday night rout, tossed by Al Trahan and Lady Yukona Cameron at Wardman Park, the trumpet solo by George V. Riley, managing director of the Wardman Hotel properties in the Capital. Much to surprise of all present—and perhaps "surprise" is too mild a word—Mr. Riley responded with alacrity when called upon by Mr. Trahan, even if everybody did laugh when he stepped to the piano. That isn't a circumstance to what they did when he stepped away from it. The lad has a mean lip that even made Prof. Phil Lampkin jealous.

One of the Aces.

Victor Fleming, whose latest directorial chore is to be seen at Loew's Palace beginning tomorrow, when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island" will be the feature of the bill, is one of the foremost members of his craft.

Fleming has turned out 30 features—many of them sensational successes—during his 15 years as a director. He was a motion-picture cameraman for ten years before he took up directing in 1919. His first directorial job was on a Douglas Fairbanks picture and its outstanding success placed him immediately in the first flight of megaphone wielders.

His youthful ambition was to be an automobile racing driver, but he was deflected from this aspiration by a sudden interest in photography. He entered pictures as a cameraman with the old American Film Co. in 1910.

Officer in World War.

Fleming served as an officer in the Signal Corps during the World War, and when the war ended accompanied the late President Woodrow Wilson to Europe as chief photographer for the Government. It was on his return to Hollywood from this junket that he received the assignment with Fairbanks.

Some of the better-known films he has directed are "The Way of All Flesh," starring Emil Jannings; "The Virginian," with Gary Cooper; "Common Clay," starring Constance Bennett, if memory serves, and "Abie's Irish Rose."

"Treasure Island" is held to be his crowning achievement, but we'll know more about that tomorrow—having missed the preview.

Our finger-in-the-breeze operative has caught wind of a proposed night club over in Montgomery County, Md., that is going to be so swanky that it will maintain a landing field for airplanes, in case anyone wishes to fly from afar to partake of its hospitality. This has never been done before by any night spot of which I am aware. Imagine landing a ship in "Happy" Walker's Lowenkeller or on the Michel Roof!

Obvious Requirement Note.

The management, of course, will have to provide for both plane and fancy pastiming.

Somervell Is Expected To Get Gotwal's Post

Maj. Behon B. Somervell is expected to be named District Engineer Commissioner in the next two days, to succeed Maj. John C. Gotwals. Appointment of a new Commissioner by the President will be made within that time, it was said at the White House yesterday.

Although the President did not disclose the identity of his selection for the post, it is understood that Maj. Somervell, recommended by Maj. Gen. E. M. Markham, chief of engineers, is the man.

Beauties in Incoming Films

Amusements For Next Week Are Disclosed

Notable Bills in Picture Houses; New 'Drunkard' at Roadside Theater.

Arthur Godfrey, whose witticisms have found favor with radio fans, and an assemblage of the most talented performers in and around Washington will be seen in "Going Native," the second, annual all-Washington revue, to be presented at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning Friday. The screen feature will be the world premier showing of "Hideout," a new vehicle from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio for Robert Montgomery and Maureen O'Sullivan, supported by C. Henry Gordon, Herman Bing, Henry Armetta, Elizabeth Patterson, Louise Henry, Edward Brophy and Mickey Rooney. Among those to be seen in the stage revue are Evelyn Tiner, pianiste; the Radio Aces, the Washboard Blues Sextet, Eddie Perkins, the singing usher; Fantana, a surprise act, and many others, not omitting a dancing chorus of 16 of the Capital's best steppers. The production has been staged by Gene Ford, with special costumes and scenery coming down from New York. The bill will be completed by the usual house features and orchestral contributions under the baton of Prof. Phil Lampkin.

• • • •

"The Man With Two Faces," adapted from the stage play, "The Dark Tower," by George S. Kaufman and Alexander Woollcott, will be the principal screen feature of the bill beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earl Theater. The principal roles are taken by Edward G. Robinson and Mary Astor, with Louis Calhern, Ricardo Cortez, Arthur Byron, David Landau and Emily Fitzroy supporting. The story is one of mystery and humor, quite out of the beaten path. The stage portion of the bill will be headed by the laughmaking "Seven Blunders of the World," otherwise the California Collegians, lately featured in "Roberta," "Fifty Million Frenchmen" and "Three's a Crowd." Others on the bill are Bert Rome and John Rand, harmonists; Mason and Yvonne in "Stealing Sister's Beau," and Lew Duthers, with Jean and Joan, in "Sophisticated Rhythm." Universal News, with Graham McNamee, and orchestra, conducted by C. Frederick Clark, will complete the entertainment.

• • • •

"Treasure Island," Robert Louis Stevenson's boyhood classic, comes to life on the screen at Loew's Palace tomorrow, to continue for the ensuing week—or longer. The pivotal roles are played by Wallace Beery, Lionel Barrymore, Lewis S. Stone and Jackie Cooper, with Otto Kruger, Dorothy Peterson and William V. Mong important in the supporting ensemble. Beery will be seen in the role of Long John Silver; Barrymore as Bill Bones and Stone as the skipper of the pirate rigger, Hispaniola, on which so much of the action takes place. In Jim Hawkins, Jackie Cooper has a role cut exactly to his measure and will be seen again as Beery's youthful idolator. The picture was directed by Victor Fleming and will be supplemented by abbreviated camera subjects and a new issue of the Metrotone News.

• • • •

Getting back, finally, on its ostensible opening day for new bills, RKO-Keith's, beginning tomorrow, will present an elaborate screen version of Charlotte Bronte's celebrated novel of "Jane Eyre," one of the minor classics of English literature. The title role will be played by Virginia Bruce, with Colin Clive, leading man on the screen in the current "One More River," opposite. Others in the cast include Beryl Mercer, who has been too long absent; Lionel Belmore, Jameson Thomas and Aileen Pringle, who, like Miss Mercer, has been invisible to the picture-watching eye too much of late. Nothing but the most commendatory reports have preceded the cinema rendition of "Jane Eyre" to the Capital. It will be supplemented by short-sound subjects of diversified interest.

• • • •

Charlie Chan, that super-sleuth of the screen, solves another blood-tingling mystery in "Charlie Chan's Courage," which Loew's Columbia Theater will present as its major attraction for the week beginning tomorrow. Who threw the knife that killed a faithful Chinese servant? Why did a pet parrot screech "Murder?" Who killed the bird? Who has been murdered in a millionaire's lonely mansion and where was the body? These questions, which the picture answers, will give you a rough idea! Warner Oland again apears as Chan, supported by Drue Leyton, Donald Woods and others. The bill will Oland again appears as Chan, supjects and a new issue of the Paramount Sound News.

• • • •

Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater, for the week beginning tomorrow, will present a return engagement, direct from the Earle, of the Warner Brothers laugh special, "Here Comes the Navy," with James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Gloria Stuart and Frank McHugh in the roles of prime importance. This picture was made with the active cooperation of the entire Pacfic fleet and gives a closeup of the United States Navy in action as well as of the foremost participants in a fictional story that is lively and amusing. The supplmentary attractions will embrace a full 15 minutes of world news, Art and Florence Lake in a comedy, "The Winnah," and a Buddy cartoon, "Buddy, the Woodsman."

• • • •

As the summer season swings into its final period, Glen Echo Park finds itself at the peak of popularity and attendance. These are ideal days—barring an occasional unexpected shower—for the enjoyment of the perfectly appointed Crystal Pool, the air-cooled Spanish Garden ballroom, with MacWilliams' music, and all the other myriad devices, afforded to the number of more than 50, for the diversion of the public. Spacious picnic groves and complete facilities for all-day outings are provided free.

• • • •

Free swimming and life-saving instruction is proving a magnet that is drawing many interested patrons to Seaside Park, down on the bay at Chesapeake Beach, Md. Classes are held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings under a qualified Red Cross life-saving instructor. Free dancing continues to be a popular diversion on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings in the Seaside Ballroom. Tuesday and Thursday nights motion pictures are shown. There are, in addition, the pier attractions and the saltwater swimming pool.

• • • •

Beginning next Tuesday night, the Roadside Theater will present its version of "The Drunkard", the famous old P. T. Barnum melodrama that recently has regained its ancient place as the most popular piece of theatrical property in America. The Roadsiders announce that they will present the original Barnum version of the "drama," with asides, olio and all the other stage trimmings that made it the most popular play in the United States almost a century ago. This will mark the return of the Roadside group's melodrama company, headed by Frances Brunt, Eugene Kressin, Janet Coon and Fred Haskin.

Helm Wins Spelling Match.

E. C. Helm, president of the Capital City Spelling Club, won the weekly spelling match last night at the Mt. Pleasant Library. The next meeting will be held September 5.

Straight From the Studios

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Aug. 15.—A project is on foot to make "Ivanhoe," Sir Walter Scott's famous novel, partly in Hollywood and partly in England. Rowland Lee, nominated as director, will confer with British representatives in the East, the idea being to make the picture next summer. International film interests may be joined in the enterprise, with United Artists or Twentieth Century becoming concerned with it here. Exteriors would be and interiors in Hollywood.

WALLACE BEERY.

"Tobacco Road" With Henry Hull.

The cooperation of stage and screen is growing more and more in Hollywood and Los Angeles, the latest being that Henry Hull will appear here on the stage in "Tobacco Road," in which his personal performance took top honors this past season in New York, along with those of Helen Hayes and George M. Cohan.

The project is in line with bringing famous actors to the boards here in their celebrated vehicles, as happened recently with Francis Lederer when he came West for the movies and did "Autumn Crocus" on the stage for Henry Duffy.

Hull is now working at Universal in "Great Expectations," and the studio is understood to be agreeable to the stage idea.

Will Rogers and Otto Kruger are among those who have made recent stage appearances in Hollywood, in addition to their film work.

Claudette Busy At Three Studios.

Claudette Colbert's career is now divided between three or four studios. She is completing "Imitation of Life" at Universal, will appear at both Paramount and Columbia, and has a picture to do for Warner Bros. Her next Columbia film is being discussed as "Maid of Honor," written by Katherine Brush.

Beery Ends Sky Trip.

Wallace Beery has just returned from a 3,500-mile trip by air and will probably appear in either "West Point of the Air," which in some ways will resemble "Hell Divers," or in "Mutiny on the Bounty." It is probable that Robert Montgomery will be seen in both of these pictures and Clark Gable will be in "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Beery's side partner, Jackie Cooper, meanwhile, is taking a trip to the Panama Canal. Beery visited the Jackson Hole country in Wyoming on his air jaunt.

Talent Reunited In "Babbitt."

A combination of stars and director which will be continued embraces Guy Bibbee, Aline MacMahon and William Keighley. This is because "Big Hearted Herbert" is being highly rated for entertainment. The next picture the trio will make together is "Babbitt," from the Sinclair Lewis novel, a revival of a silent picture.

Anita Louise Headed Up.

Stardom is the goal forecast for Anita Louise under her contract with Warners. The document finally has been signed and following "Bachelor of Arts" at Fox, Miss Louise will return to the Warner studio. Miss Louise was with RKO, but had little chance to accomplish anything. She then played on the stage and free-lanced to good advantage, which resulted in the new Warner contract.

Film Table

Screen and stage bills will be presented on the following schedules at the theaters named:

Stocks Drift Slightly Lower In Quiet Sales

Loss Totals Five-tenths as Trading Rises to 574,750 Shares.

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—Deprived of inflationary stimulus, the stock market drifted toward slightly lower levels today in extremely quiet trading.

Movements were mixed. Speculative interest shifted from metals and other recent inflation favorites to building, tobacco and special issues directly affected by the day's news.

A further recovery in the dollar against foreign exchanges and in bonds, including U. S. Treasury obligations, marked the waning of the inflation fever that flared up last week on the announcement of nationalization of silver and increased issue of currency backed by that metal.

Gold Arrangement.

Overnight reflection on the arrangement for gold exports from the United States and latest monetary developments in Washington convinced some observers that the Treasury would stick close to sound money policies. The dollar rose to levels that precluded further gold exports.

The share market manifested some disappointment over failure of the railroads to obtain a temporary injunction against enforcement of the railway pension bill passed in the last Congress.

That news, however, was offset in a measure by declaration of the usual quarterly dividend of $2.25 a share on American Telephone & Telegraph stock.

American Telephone rallied moderately on the news, closing three-quarters of a point higher, at 111, although forecasters generally had predicted no dividend change.

Five-Tenths Lower.

The net result of the day's uncertain movements was a loss of five-tenths of a point in the average for 90 stocks compiled by the Standard Statistics Co., carrying it down to 71.8. Volume totaled 574,750 shares compared with 531,300 yesterday.

American Sumatra Tobacco rallied more than a point on announcement of an extra dividend of 25 cents a share on the stock. Meat-packing shares were moderately strong as hog prices in Chicago established a top above $6 a hundredweight, the highest since September, 1931.

Losses of a point or more were recorded in American Can, U. S. Smelting, Union Pacific and Spiegel-May-Stern. Most losses and gains were restricted to fractions.

Power Production Rises During Week

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—Electric power output last week totaled 1,659,043,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,657,638,000 kilowatt hours the previous week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The increase over a year ago was 1.9 per cent, against an increase of 0.5 per cent the week before.

Regional decreases from 1933 for last week were:

New England, 5.9 per cent against a decrease of 8.6 per cent the week before; Central Industrial 0.3, against 2.6; Rocky Mountain, 3.7 against 1.5.

Regional gains from 1933 for last week were:

Middle Atlantic, 1.7 per cent, against a rise of 1.0 per cent the week before; West Central, 11.5, against 9.7; Southern States, 1.3 against 1.7; Pacific Coast, 8.1 against 8.2.

Banking Groups to Hold Nation-Wide Exercises

New York, Aug. 15.—Over 200 chapters of the American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers' Association in towns and cities throughout the United States will hold their annual commencement exercises at the same hour and linked together by radio on the evening of Septembr 4, 1934, according to an announcement by Charles F. Ellery, president of the Institute. E. V. Newton, of the Cleveland Trust Company, Cleveland, Ohio, chairman of the institute's radio commencement committee, is in charge of the arrangements.

Behavior of Dollar in Foreign Exchange Market in the Last Week Indicates the Distrust With Which It Is Viewed Abroad.

By Ralph West Robey.

Fluctuations of the dollar in the foreign exchange market within the last week have been the widest in some months. At the week-end our currency fell to sufficient discount to make it profitable to ship gold. This is only the second time since the dollar was devalued to 59.06 per cent of its former content that our currency has been at such a heavy discount. In the former case strength came into the market before any actual metal left. This time, according to reports, two or three shipments have been made.

The particular reason for the drop of the foreign exchange value of the dollar this time, it is said in informed circles, has not been except incidentally the action of the Administration on silver. The underlying cause was a report abroad that the dollar was to be further devalued. Nationalization of silver exerted an influence only because it was interpreted to indicate that such devaluation is close at hand. The bad break in Government bonds and the amateurish manner in which the Administration rushed to their rescue were taken as further evidence along the same line.

Report of More Devaluation Has Continued for Months.

This report of further devaluation shows remarkable persistence. It has been going the rounds from time to time ever since the first cut was made. In this country it usually has been brushed aside as without foundation. Abroad, nevertheless, it still carries weight, with the result that almost every time it is started there is enough selling of dollars to make a distinct impression on the market. This does not mean that the selling is large, for the foreign exchange market is extremely thin, but it does show the distrust with which some groups still view the monetary policy of the United States.

To some extent such distrust is the inevitable aftermath of a current policy such as we have had during the last 15 months. Even in the best of circumstances it would take time to overcome that record, for it revealed an incredible ignorance of the part of money in an economic system and of what determines the value of money. This, however, has been only part of the reason for the continued willingness of foreigners to rush out of dollars at the slightest provocation. Equally important, and probably even more important, has been the refusal of the Administration to adopt any kind of a monetary system or monetary policy and stay with it. We still, in so far as one can tell from the statements and actions of Administration officials, are in the midst of experiments

"Experimental" Attitude Shown in Various Ways.

The nationalization of silver was spectacular, but on the whole not expecially significant, evidence of this continuing experimental" attitude toward money. Far more conclusive evidence is found in the refusal of the Administration to make its position clear. We have had, for example, no official denial that the whole idea of a "commodity dollar" has been abandoned, although we had two statements by the President pledging the Administration to such a currency. Likewise there has been no official indication that the dollar will not be further devalued.

On both of these points the public has taken a hopeful attitude. It has taken the establishment of $35 an ounce for gold as indicating that the commodity dollar is a thing of the past. And it had interpreted the statement of the Secretary of the Treasury, that he will permit the export of gold, to mean that there will be no further devaluation, at least as an attempt to raise prices.

Such interpretations, however, are not sufficient, granting it is desired that the public both here and abroad is to have genuine confidence in our currency. They at best can give rise only to hopes, not firm convictions. And as long as there are only hopes, our currency will continue to be a football among foreign exchange speculators—the very thing which the Government explained some months ago must be prevented if our march to recovery was not to be disturbed by monetary factors.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—Steel prices unchanged.

Foreign Exchanges.

(Associated Press.)

London—Irregularity developed in prices on the stock exchange today. Industrials, oil and rubber shares were favored by speculators and hardened, while home rails weakened on disappointing traffic reports. Other sections eased on profit taking, and the market closed irregular.

Berlin—The very small business transacted on the boerse today kept prices lower throughout the list. A slight recovery occured later, and the market closed quiet.

Paris—Closed, Assumption Day.

Bonds Manage To Rise Trifle; Trading Drops

Prime Investments Steady; Transfers Decline to $12,360,000.

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—Further advances of one to three points in lower priced railroad and utility issues featured today's bond market. Prime investments were steady and the Government list made modest gains.

Transfers approximated $12,360,000 par value, compared with $12,988,000 on Tuesday, and the Government turnover totaled $6,630,000, against $5,670,000 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average of 60 domestic corporate loans advanced three-tenths of a point, to 83.2, or within striking distance of where it was last Thursday before the severe reaction in the market got under way.

Continuance of the strong tone for the secondary bonds that became so pronounced yesterday was in the face of a somewhat shaky stock market and irregular tendencies in commodities, and was attributed by brokers to an oversold condition in some of these issues and a better investment demand. Boston & Maine 5's of '55 advanced 3 points to 75, Great Northern 4½'s of '76 were 1½ higher at 67½, and Louisville & Arkansas 5's improved 1⅜ to 57½. Local traction issues soared, although unification developments were lacking. Interboro 6's, advancing 6 points to 39, and other issues, including the 7's, Manhattan Railway 4's and Third Avenue 5's, were 1 to 4 higher.

Other corporate issues gaining a point or so on the day included some obligations of American Smelting, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Bush Terminal, Chicago & Northwestern, Columbia Gas & Electric, Delaware & Hudson, Louisville & Nashville, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Pennsylvania, Rochester Gas & Electric, Southern Pacific, Southwestern Bell Telephone and Western Pacific.

The Government list was 5-32ds to nearly ½ point higher with both New York City and out-of-town banks reported to be placing substantial orders. With the approach of another major Treasury financing program, Government bond experts expressed the belief that the market would be well maintained in anticipation of that event. Federal farm mortgage 3¼s were nearly ½ point higher at 100.28, and the Treasury 4¼-3¼s of 1945 were 13-32ds higher at 102.21.

The foreign section was featured by renewed strength in Argentine issues. French and German governments were inclined to sag.

Narrow Price Moves Feature Curb Trading

Some Inactive Specialties Gain as Sales Decline to 101,000 Shares.

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—The curb market closed with a fairly steady tone today. A number of inactive specialties rose substantially, but the main line of shares showed scant changes.

Dealings were dull and indecisive from the start. The trend was slightly upward in the noon hour, but mild unsettlement occurred in the late trading.

Oils were firm in spots. Gulf rose about a point, while South Pennsylvania Oil finished 2¼ higher. Greyhound Corporation advanced nearly a point in a buying flurry.

Miscellaneous issues advancing around two to three points in thin dealings included Buckeye Pipe, Childs Co. preferred, A. O. Smith, Montgomery Ward A and Lynch Corporation. Safety Car Heating reacted three points.

Standard Oil of Indiana, Hiram Walker, Swift & Co., Newmont and Distillers Corporation - Seagrams ended steady. Electric Bond & Share and Swift International yielded slightly.

Transfers dwindled to 101,000 shares, compared with 136,000 yesterday.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Silk—Current sales of silk goods are said to be disappointing to manufacturers. It is reported that sales of acetate and other types of rayon for printing and converting are making a good showing against the demand for silk fabrics.

Copper—Domestic consumers have not altered their policy of buying in small lots for their most pressing needs. Some trade quarters understand that consumption is at the rate of 40,000 to 45,000 pounds a month, or considerably above current estimated United States production.

Zinc—Day-to-day trading continues light and prime Western slab metal is still quoted at 4.38 cents a pound, East St. Louis.

Cotton goods—Some textile quarters report a considerable pick-up in print cloth sales at firm prices. There have been transactions at 5⅞ cents a yard in 38½-inch 60-48s; at 7 cents for 64-60s; at 8 cents for 29-inch 68-72s and at 9¼ cents for squares. A considerable part of the business is said to have come from printers furnishing goods to the Government.

Gossip of New York Markets

By Claude A. Jagger.

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—The world money markets awoke to the fact this week that the American dollar is still a gold dollar.

This was made clear six months ago when the dollar was put on an international gold bullion standard, at the rate of 15 5-21 grains of the yellow metal per dollar.

In the excitement over the nationalization of silver as a part of the program to restore the value and stability of that metal there was an inclination to forget the gold behind the dollar.

Under an international bullion standard, gold is used only to settle international balances which are not automatically canceled by the exchange of goods and services and extension of credit between nations.

Late February, Secretary Morgenthau made it clear that under regulations governing the movements of gold, banks and others desiring to ship it abroad at a time when the dollar rates in terms of other currencies made it profitable to do so, would promptly be given permits to effect the transactions.

But at no time until this week did the dollar go to such a discount, and remain there long enough to prompt gold shipments. The dollar was at a premium above its new parity most of the time, and the movement of gold was toward the United States, rather than away.

Yesterday, however, for the first time since the new gold basis was set up early in the year, one of the large New York banks sought to export $1,000,000 in gold, in settlement of foreign exchange transactions, and was at once granted permission.

At last, bear speculators in the dollar in Paris and elsewhere had concrete evidence that gold would be shipped, or in other words, that the gold value of the dollar would be automatically supported by actual metal whenever it fell to a discount of close to 1 per cent. With approximately one-third of the world's monetary gold supply in this country, it became apparent that the dollar was unassailable.

Wheat Values Continue to Move Lower

Uncertainties Over Reports on Crop and Food Control Are Factor.

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—Disturbed by uncertainties over reports of proposed measures at Washington touching control of crops and food prices, Chicago wheat values underwent material fresh tumbles today.

Big breaks in European wheat quotations, partly a result of general rains relieving Australian drought, were a contributing bearish influence.

It was the fifth successive day of an irregular downward trend of prices here, and the extreme overnight fall of wheat today was 2⅝ cents a bushel, carrying the market to about 11 cents under last Friday's top point.

Close Nervous.

Wheat in Chicago closed nervous, ⅞-1¾ cents lower than yesterday's finish; corn unchanged to ⅜ higher; oats ¼-⅝ down, and provisions varying from 5 cents decline to 12 cents advance.

With Liverpool and Rotterdam wheat quotations showing 5 cents a bushel setback, Chicago grain markets displayed weakness the moment trading began.

Corn Belt rains were a contributing bearish factor, but attention mainly focused for the time being as well as late the day on Washington developments regarding Administration plans to prevent what Government officials would consider undue price changes or unwise planting of crops.

For a time, however, shortly after the opening, the downward tendency of all grain prices was reversed by an authoritative unofficial new crop estimate of 1934 corn production indicating 136,000,000 bushels loss since August 1.

A bulge of nearly 2 cents in corn prices from the day's bottom was reported.

Total Corn Crop.

The probable 1934 total corn crop was estimated at 1,462,000,000 bushels, compared with the Government's August 1 forecast of 1,607,000,000 bushels and with a 5-year average of 2,561,000,000.

Upturns of corn prices, though, failed to make much progress into new ground, and wheat at no time rallied to equal with yesterday's finish.

Unusual nervousness of traders in all cereals was evidenced by many sharp fluctuations with rallies of wheat prices bringing out selling that came largely from houses with connections East. Oats were governed in the main by action of wheat.

Provisions averaged lower with grains, despite new upturns of hog values. Bellies, however, sold at a new high for the season.

Broaca Stops Streak of Detroit

Bridges Is Pounded Out as Yankees Win by 8-2 Score.

weather after a morning's downpour.

Bridges quickly contributed to his own undoing by wildness. He walked three Yankees in the first two innings, and two of them scored, one on Ben Chapman's single in the first frame and another on Frankie Crosetti's home-run drive into the left field stands in the second inning.

This was sufficient to clinch the game but the Yankees combed Bridges for three hits and two more runs in the fifth, hammered Charley Fischer's offerings for another brace of tallies in the sixth and finished their scoring off Luke Hamlin in the eighth.

Broaca yielded ten safe blows but he was highly effective in the pinches and in the sixth, when the Tigers scored their only runs, the young Yankee pitcher was aided by some magnificent defensive work by the aging Babe Ruth.

It looked like a typical Tiger uprising as White, Cochrane and Gehringer led off the sixth with rousing singles. Ruth's fast handling of Gehringer's smash prevented White from scoring, for the moment, and then after White finally tallied on an infield force play, the Babe raced far up the bank in right-center to rob Billy Rogell of a two-bagger.

It was the most sensational fielding play of the game and Ruth was given as big an ovation as if he had hit a home run with the bases full. Another run scored after the catch, but the Tigers were held in check thereafter.

The advance of Miss James and Miss Stammers kept alive the fire under the foreign threat. They both scored comparatively easy victories, Miss James defeating Marianne Hunt, of Los Angeles, 6—2, 6—4, and Miss Stammers conquering Katharine Winthrop, of Boston, 6—3, 6—0.

Dorette Miller Gains Net Finals

Upsets Miss Moore in Western Maryland Tournament.

OAKLAND, Md., Aug. 15 (Spl.).—Despite threatening storms, the Western Maryland Tennis Tournament advanced into the final stages in the men's and women's singles with upset victories still being posted. One was the loss of Miss Sara Moore, Washington, to Mrs. Dorette Miller, Washington, in the semifinals of the women's singles.

Mrs. Miller, playing a steady, wearing game, had full command of the situation, winning 6—3, 6—3. Miss Moore seemed unable to control her usual powerful service and lost numerous points on double faults and weak net balls.

Rain stopped the other women's semifinals, halting Mrs. Elinor Turney's brilliant rally in the second set. Mrs. Turney was leading, 6 to 5, after having dropped the first to Miss Frances Grimes, Morgantown, W. Va., seeded No. 1 player.

Men's singles—Quarter-finals, Elmer Rudy, Baltimore, defeated Donald Snyder, Greensburg, Pa., 6—0, 6—0.

Semifinals, Frank Broida, Pittsburgh, defeated William J. Clardy, 6—1, 6—1; Elmer Rudy Baltimore, defeated Joel Baker, Washington, 6—2, 7—5; Robert Madden, Pittsburgh, defeated John R. Brown, Pittsburgh, 6—4, 12—10. James W. Allen, Charleston, defeated Alex Keiles, Baltimore, 6—3, 6—4.

the new National clay court champion, gained a bracket on the field and the first place in the semifinals with a five-set victory over the higher-ranked Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., 6—3, 6—4, 4—6, 5—7, 6—2.

In the other two singles engagements, Sidney Wood, who shared the Davis Cup singles assignments with Shields, qualified for the quarter-finals by breaking down Jack Tidball's none-too-strong backhand for a 6—2, 7—5, 3—6 victory.

Johnny Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, a semifinalist at Longwood last week, showed that Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, the new National junior champion, has much to learn about the grass game while defeating him decisively in straight sets, 6—0, 6—3, 6—3.

Fourth round singles—J. Gilbert Hall, New York, won by default from Francis X. Shields, New York; John Van Ryn, Philadelphia, defeated Gene Mako, Los Angeles, 6—0, 6—3, 6—3; Sidney Wood, New York, defeated Jack Tidball, Hollywood, Calif., 6—2, 7—5, 3—6, 6—4.

Princess Peg was clocked in 2:03½ in her winning heat while Muscletone stepped the third mile in 2:04¼.

Emily Stokes Fails.

The big disappointment of the race, the high point of the harness racing season, was the failure of Little Emily Stokes, the filly owned by C. W. Phellis, of New York, which had captured the majority of the dress rehearsals and entered today's competition a 2-to-1 choice in the auction pools. She failed to show her usual consistency, however, breaking out of stride in the first two heats and then closing fast to take third in her final appearance on the track.

which is far beyond the batting performance of any other team in either big league. I have not only got the best defensive infield there is but every member of it is hitting .300 or better. We lead the league in stolen bases and our pitchers have done consistently good work. So where does destiny come in?"

Today's defeat, after a string of 14 victories, was nothing for the Tigers to worry about, in Cochrane's view.

"We can't win 'em all," he commented afterward, "and probably we were overdue to take one on the chin but we will win 'em when we need 'em.

The Federal Diary

By Morgan Baker.
(Trade-mark Applied For)

TESTS for press assistants at Government Printing Office are announced by Civil Service Commission. The examinations will be open and competitive. The pay is 84 cents an hour (based on the 40-hour week). Requirements include at least one year's experience as printing press assistant, including feeding. Feeding alone will not be sufficient. The closing date is September 4. The wage is subject to deduction of 5 per cent under the economy act and to a retirement deduction of 3½ per cent.

BAKER

Sinking to a new low, the Civil Service reemployment register now stands at 1,025, the commission announced yesterday. Of this number, 203 are listed as serving in temporary positions.

McDevitts in Denver.

"Martha and Mac" McDevitt, genial coeditors of the National Rural Letter Carrier, are in Denver to attend the thiry-first annual convention of the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association. Going West on the same train was Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, returning to Wyoming.

No "softies" are these rural mail men, who number 40,000 scattered throughout the States. Reaching out into every county, every isolated district, these diligent, plodding carriers come into contact with the backbone of the Nation. They carry the mail over dry, parched roads in summer, and in winter ford icy streams, climb slippery mountains, delivering mail in communities that never heard the whistle of a locomotive.

Two Travel Unit auditors at Internal Revenue, Matt Miles and Emil Ehrlich, have been transferred to the Second New York Division headquarters at 17 Battery place, New York City.

AFTER more than 40 years in service, Martin R. Speelman (*) retired yesterday from the Government Printing Office as superintendent of binding. Public Printer A. E. Giegengack has appointed Joseph Duffy, of Akron, Ohio, to succeed Mr. Speelman, effective today.

Mr. Duffy has been employed in the Government Printing Office bindery several years. He is a member of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, a graduate of Georgetown University Law School and a member of the District bar.

Mrs. Ansley Gosnell, secretary to Stanley Reed, general counsel, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, is grief stricken over the sudden death early yesterday of her brother, Jack Mayfield, 15, who was visiting her from Eldorado, Ark.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Columbia (Shirley Temple in "Baby, Take a Bow"), or to Loew's Palace (second week of Will Rogers in "Handy Andy"), or to Loew's Fox (stage, Ina Ral Hutton and her Melodears and other acts; screen, W. C. Fields and Baby LeRoy in "The Old-Fashioned Way").

Diary office hours are: Daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Bureau of Safety, ICC, is now housed in the new building at Twelfth street and Constitution avenue on the seventh floor. With the absence of shades, fans and air conditioning, the employes are bearing the full brunt of the heat. Otherwise, the quarters are comfortable and spacious.

Underwood & Underwood.

When a case involving a broadcasting station, charging some breach of radio regulations or ethics, comes up before the new Communications Commission, its representatives had better tell the truth. It will be a two to one bet that members of the commission have been personally observing the offender, as they often spend many hours listening to the various programs. Photo shows, left to right—Commissioners Thad Brown and Eugene O. Sykes, the latter being chairman, listening in with a high-powered long and short wave set.

BLACKIE BEAR By D. SAM COX

They Have a Mighty Talky Sunday

There never was a lot of bigger newsmakers than that crowd of Creek Folks, and they kept all of their neighbors full of something to talk about. When Uncle Joe and Aunt Judy got over to Aunt Lindy's house, they didn't have a bit of time for opening the conversation by saying, "Isn't it a nice day?" or anything like they always did. Aunt Lindy met them at the gate, and before they were out of the wagon she was telling them about the way somebody had stolen the great big last year's ham that she had cooked for their dinner, and had tied her dog and left him lying in his house all night with a muzzle on him so he couldn't make any noise. She just couldn't talk fast enough, and she hurried them around to the dog house and to the spring house, so she could show them just how it all happened.

"And just look at these curious tracks! I never saw any like them before in my life!" Aunt Lindy said.

"Well, I have," Uncle Joe said. "They are just like the ones I saw around my well after somebody shot my gun that night when I was trying to sit up all night to shoot the robber if he came, but went to sleep and dropped my gun. Yes, ma'am; they are the very same tracks, and I am certain that some thief of a man has had him some shoes made that look like some sort of animal's feet, and he puts them on when he goes out to rob folks. Who ever heard of an animal that could shoot a gun and tie up a dog and shut him in his house, and then carry off a ham, like that fellow did last night? There just isn't any such animal, and we have got to find out who this man is."

And then they all went around to the little front porch and sat down and talked and talked about the robbery. You had just as well believe that there was enough talking to do to keep every tongue busy, and Jay Bird says they were so busy talking that Aunt Lindy forgot all about her dinner that was on the fire, and let a whole pan of biscuits burn till they were just as black as Blackie Bear, and then she had to make some more.

Jay Bird says that he isn't right sure that Aunt Lindy and the others didn't get more pleasure out of talking about this little frolic of the Creek Folks than they would have got out of eating that old ham, and there was little else talked about all day. The fact is that they were so full of talk that they forgot all about Hound Dog until after dinner, when Aunt Lindy went to feed him. Then he was not there! Where do you suppose he was, and what was he doing? What do you guess? Well, Jay Bird will tell you another day exactly what Hound Dog did.

Walt Mason, Himself

Something to Do.

Day by day we do our chores, some inside and some outdoors; some are busy pruning trees, some are herding bumble bees; one plays tunes upon a horn, one is doctoring a corn. One good man is mowing grass, one is growing garden sass, one is busy breaking rocks, one is winding eight-day clocks; we are earning helpful dimes in these trying, grievous times, toiling on, the long day through, glad we have some chores to do. It is true the wage is small, we have seen our stipends fall, and we don't begin to earn half the coin we used to burn in the good old gladsome times when the trees were bearing dimes, and the kopecks grew on shrubs, and we stacked our wealth in tubs. But our labors still provide many things which are denied to our neighbors who can't find any job at which to grind. There are countless delegates in these broad United States who are lacking pie and jam, wiener-wurst and deviled ham, all the things we can afford to adorn our groaning board. There are countless busted gents who can't raise the 15 cents that would rent a modest bed when the darkness is widespread. We have luscious, wholesome eats, we have mattresses with sheets, we have moral books to read, we have everything, indeed, in our divers homes and haunts, that a normal person wants. So we do our daily chores, painting barns and cellar doors, building fences out of mud, teaching cows to chew the cud, and we're thankful, it is true, that we have our chores to do.

Farmers Beat Bond Lawyer

Knock Attorney Senseless Before Public Tax Sale of Farms.

Caruthersville, Mo., Aug. 15 (AP).—A group of farmers severely beat an attorney for a committee of drainage district bondholders today, then watched the owners of 13 farms bid in their property at a public tax sale not attended by the lawyer. The sale disposed of the farms for about a tenth of their value, according to the sheriff.

The victim, Charles L. Waugh, St. Louis, was knocked unconscious, received four cuts on the head, but after treatment was reported not in a critical condition.

Sheriff S. E. Juden, who conducted the sale after the attack, said Waugh told him he could not identify the men responsible for the beating. No arrests had been made. About 150 men were in or around the courthouse at the time of the assault.

Sales of the farms today were made to satisfy tax judgments obtained by drainage districts. Farmers in the area have organized a "taxpayers league," which opposes payment of the drainage district taxes.

Foresters Quell Western Blazes

New Fires Under Control in Idaho Mountains.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 15 (AP).—The foresters' strategic campaign against fires in the Clearwater and Selway Forests of central Idaho today bore fruit.

New fires were controlled and progress made with the larger blazes, although men were fighting against heavy odds in the Selway Forest, where mountainous terrain made operations difficult. Nearly 400 men battled the fire on a 20-mile front.

The fire on Pete King Creek, in the Selway Forest, was partly quelled, 15 miles of the 45-mile perimeter being controlled. Nearly 600 men, battling stubbornly, saw promise of control of the McLendon Creek fire in the Selway.

Uproar Halts Youth Parley

Radicals Try in Vain to Oust Girl Chairman of Congress.

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—With "left" and "right wingers" trying to shout each other down, the first American Congress of Youth was almost wrecked on its first day today.

The trouble arose when supposedly radical groups tried to elect a permanent chairman to replace 24-year-old Viola Ilma, organizer of the congress. The other faction shouted that the "lefts" were trying to control things, but finally Miss Ilma forced through an adjournment until tomorrow.

Out on the sidewalk she talked of her plans, one of which is to seek a $10,000,000 Congressional appropriation for a National survey of youth problems.

"We do not want a dole for youth," she said.

Asked if she would accept less than $10,000,000, Miss Ilma puffed at her cigarette and smiled.

Three Little Pigs Pay Farmer's Way Into Fair

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—The three little pigs went, not to market, but to the World's Fair today, and for them their owner received eight admission tickets.

Alfred Dohe, Bensonville, Ill., brought the week-old piglets in a bushel basket and offered them at the ticket window. Because it was farm week they were accepted.

They proved one of the noisiest admission commodities yet received, fair officials said.

Alpha Sigma Alpha Parley.

Old Point Comfort, Va., Aug. 15 (AP).—Alpha Sigma Alpha, a National sorority with a membership of 5,000, will hold its annual convention here August 22 to 26.
